PREFACE

The author undertook the immense task of compiling this Chaffin history at the urgent request of J. H. Stockham, Esq., of Des Moines, Ia. Mr. Stockham, whose mother was a Chaffin, was deeply interested in the history of this family and had collected considerable data concerning it. But as Comptroller of Drake University of Des Moines he had no time to undertake this enterprise; and learning that Rev. W. L. Chaffin of Massachusetts was a member of this family, and had over thirty years' experience in historical work, he urged him to undertake it, promising to aid him all he could, a promise he has amply fulfilled. Mr. Stockham must, therefore, have the credit of initiating this work. This was early in 1911. The author had, however, become much interested in the family history some years before this by correspondence with the Misses Abby A. and Frederika N. Lewis of Cambridge, Mass., members of the Chaffin family. These ladies had collected much valuable information, some of which but for their painstaking efforts might never have come to light, and the author is under great obligation to them for the invaluable assistance they rendered in turning over their material to him and in stimulating his interest. It is, however, doubtful if he would have undertaken the immense labor required in compiling this history, or have assumed its financial risks, but for the earnest appeal and encouragement of Mr. Stockham, as already stated.

The author is glad to acknowledge his great indebtedness for assistance rendered by Mr. Stockham and by the Misses Lewis. Hardly less is the debt of gratitude he owes to Willard S. Chaffin of Akron, O., who has shown the liveliest interest in this enterprise, and in the most thorough and businesslike way has hunted up and carefully copied and transmitted the family records of the branch of Chaffins to which he belongs, descendants of Simon, who settled in Ohio about a century ago. Next to these four persons must be named Miss C. A. Jewett of Acton, Mass., who, besides many valuable family data, furnished the information relative to the oldest Chaffin house and the ancient modes of housekeeping and living described in the appendix of this book.

The author would be glad to recount the kind services of the many persons who have assisted him in the compilation of this history. The time would fail him if he undertook even to name them all. But he must, at least, express his indebtedness to Charles A. Flagg, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Caroline S. Ross, Jerome S. Seacord, Unadilla, N. Y.; Howard M. Chapin, Providence, R. I.; Mrs. J. E. Wilson, Chicago, Ill.; Ora G. Chaffin, Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Abbie E. Chaffin, Worcester, Mass.; Horace T. Tuttle, town clerk of Acton, Mass.; Hon. John Davis Long, Hingham, Mass.; J. P. Chafin, Troy, Wis.; William H. Chaffin, Portsmouth, O.; Mrs. Diadamia B. Lewis, Hutchinson, Kan.; S. A. Holden, Windham, Vt.; Mrs. Orlena A. Zabriskie, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. Grace W. Hicks, Wollaston, Mass.; Mrs. Florence F. Looney, Lancaster, N. Y.; Mrs. Stella L. Williams, Wallingford, Vt.; Rev. Jenkin L. Jones, Chicago, Ill.; John H. Fessenden, Tampa, Fla.; Charles R. Chaffin, Gorham, Me.; Mrs. Caroline Seagrave, Worcester, Mass.; H. W. Sanderson, Littleton Common, Mass.; Mrs. Tina H. Chaffin, Phillipston, Mass.; and there are many others who deserve grateful mention almost as much as those named above. We sometimes "save the best for the last," and it is simple justice to say that the author's most helpful assistant in this laborious work is his wife, whose intelligent and painstaking co-operation greatly lightened her husband's task.

So much for the Robert Chaffin family. But the compiler must express his grateful appreciation of services rendered in two other directions. At almost exactly the same time that Robert Chaffin was married and began the numerous family with which this history is mainly concerned, John Chaffin settled in Virginia, married and founded the Virginia Chaffin family, a numerous one, locating in that and in adjacent states. While a complete genealogical history of this family was out of the question, it seemed very desirable that a general sketch of it should be given. The material for such a sketch is meagre but the author was fortunate in finding an intelligent and deeply interested member of this family, Mrs. Marie B. S. Forbrich of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was willing to do what she could in the preparation of some account of this Virginia Chaffin family, and he is under great obligation to her for the excellent manner in which she has done this work. And he cannot sufficiently emphasize the great kindness, the warm interest and earnest efforts of Thomas H. Chaffin, Esq., of Taunton, England, in the search he instituted to discover the immediate ancestry of Robert Chaffin with whom our Chaffin history begins. Thomas Chaffin has also earned the gratitude of all our family for the information he has given concerning the Chaffins of England, as may be seen by reference to this subject in the appendix of this book.

The remarkably fine illustrations contained in it are the work of the American Engraving Company of Boston.

Doubtless errors will be found in this work. No genealogy can be free from them. But to hastily assume that the compiler is to blame for them is a grave injustice; he simply reports the facts that are given to him. The causes of error are very numerous. Incorrect data may be given town clerks, or correct data may be incorrectly recorded. Errors creep even into family records. Gravestone inscriptions are not always to be trusted, especially in their eulogistic statements concerning the character of the persons of whom they are memorials, epitaphs being sometimes monumental lies. Not only omissions, but falsifications, of dates are, for obvious reasons, occasionally made. Defective memory, illegible penmanship, and careless copying are responsible for many errors. The author of this history has sometimes been given dates or statements quite diverse from each other by two, and even three, informants of apparently equal authority, and nothing can try the genealogist's patience more than this. Correspondents are occasionally careless and guesswork is made to supply the lack of record, the remark sometimes being made, "I am not sure this is correct, but I guess it is near enough for your purpose."

The author desires to gratefully acknowledge the uniform courtesy with which his requests for information have been responded to. He must have wearied some members of our family by his persistence in writing them for exact and complete details, but while some have been indifferent, and a few made no answer at all after repeated solicitation, his several thousand letters have met on the whole a fair and intelligent reception.

The abbreviations in this book are: b. for born, d. for died, m. for married, int. for intention of marriage, unm. for unmarried, s. for son, dau. for daughter, res. for residence, abt. for about, bap. for baptized.

INTRODUCTION

THE NAME

There is a curious legend concerning the origin of the name Chaffin. It may be found in Champfleury's "Cats, Past and Present," and is told as follows: "The name Chaffin may be derived from a place called 'Le Chaffin' in the Sologne in France. It was named Chaffin (or Le Chaffin, which became corrupted into, and is at present, Chaffin) after a cat who fought with Satan and vanquished him and so saved a bridge that Satan was determined to destroy." A cat plucky enough and clever enough to beat the Devil we may be proud to commemorate by our family name. The name is one that is easily misunderstood and corrupted. The author remembers that through carelessness and misunderstanding, he has been addressed by as many as nineteen different names, among which are Chapin, Chaffee, Chaffin, Chafner, Chaplin, Chaffinch, Chalfant, Clafin, Chappin, Shaffin, Chafin, and a number of others. One member of the family, now represented by several families in Kansas, in a freak of eccentricity, by a petition to the legislature in Maine, had his name changed to Chabin, without improving it by the change. Another member of the family of three generations ago, apparently economical of paper and ink, dropped an f from the name, making it Chāfin. Speculating upon his reason for such a change, the author recalls a joke of which he was the subject, when, at an entertainment at North Easton, Mass., some one said, "I am not going to Unity Church any more for the minister is always chaffing (Chaffin) in the pulpit." The person alluded to above, who dropped one f from his name, may not have wished to be known as "always chaffing," and so wrote Chafin instead of Chaffin. His descendants, who are numerous, and one member of whom is the best known of all our family, Hon. Eugene W. Chafin, twice a candidate for the presidency of the United States, have continued this method of spelling the name.

Howard M. Chapin of Providence, R. I., who has given the subject careful study, has come to the conclusion that the Chapins and Chaffins were originally one family and probably descended from Chapyn or Chopyn and were of Saxon origin, some of them moving to France during the reign of the Plantagenets, and there taking the name Chopin.

THE CHAFFIN COAT-OF-ARMS

The coat-of-arms already shown in this book is certainly pleasing to the eye. It was not manufactured for the occasion, as some heraldic emblems have been in order to bolster up a claim for the aristocratic antecedents of a family. It is a genuine Chaffin coat-of-arms, sent to the author by Thomas H. Chaffin of Taunton, England, from whom many kind favors have been received. It is said to be the arms of the Somersetshire Chaffin family of England, but while we cannot confidently claim it as belonging to our Robert line, it may turn out to be so, and whether it does or not matters little. It is presented here for what it is worth. There is another Chaffin coat-of-arms belonging to the Dorsetshire, England, branch of the family, somewhat different from the one already referred to. The significance of the star and mural crown which form the crest of this one is that this coat-of-arms was the reward of some Chaffin who rendered distinguished service in the army or navy of England. Its motto, "Nil Desperandum," is tonic and bracing, one to encourage and inspire.

THE FAMILY ORIGIN

There was a story, strongly credited by some of the western members of the family, that our Robert Chaffin line was of Scotch origin. The story is based upon the existence of an "Old Bible" that was burned at Jacob Newland's in Scioto Co., O., Apr. 5, 1885. It was said that this Bible was dated sometime in 1400—but that "none of them who had it could read it!" In 1899 Reuben Chaffin, living in California, then sixty-four years old, told his neice, Miss Cynthia Malone, that his father, Reuben, told him that this old Bible had been handed down from father to oldest son, who also received the name of Reuben, that his father “was the oldest son and was born near a lake near Edinburgh, Scotland, where Edinburg now stands, but that the other children were born in America,” and that “the oldest name, Reuben, had been handed down from father to son since sometime in 1400.” He alleged that there was a title in the old Bible aforesaid to a Chaffin “estate near Edinburgh which had been handed down for generations, with the names of all the Reubens who had possessed the property.” Now this is a very pretty story, but in the judgment of the author of this history it is pure fiction, with absolutely no basis of fact to support it, the fancy of a man of whom a relative says, “My uncle has been in trances, and has never been well.” In fact, his father Reuben, alleged to have been born near Edinburgh, was born in Massachusetts, and he was not an “oldest son,” and his father was not Reuben but was Francis, the son of Robert, and this Reuben’s son Reuben was not his first born, and so this fiction that “the oldest name, Reuben, had been handed down from father to son since some time in 1400,” has no shred of evidence to give it any credibility whatever. That there may have been an “old Bible” published in Scotland may be true, but when it is said that “none of them who had it could read it,” that the elder Reuben “read that Bible and it was the only one he did read,” and of the son Reuben a relative says, “I think my uncle could read it but am not certain,” and when it is considered that no one has any distinct remembrance of what writing was in it, we must refer all this Scotch tradition for its origin to the man who first told it, who “has been in trances and has never been well.” Not to dismiss this story too summarily, however, since one of the clearheaded western Chaffins said, “Our Scotch origin has always been referred to through our line,” the writer consulted three intelligent Scotchmen who tell him they never even heard of the name Chaffin in Scotland.

There is another tradition better worth noting. The author remembers that his mother used to tell him that it had always been said in the Chaffin family that they came to this country from Wales, or at least had a Welsh origin. Such family traditions frequently point to the truth and deserve consideration. Apropos of that a Tennessee Chaffin states that his line came to this country from Ireland, but that they had previously emigrated from Wales to Ireland, and therefore were not Irish. These suggestions of a Welsh origin of our family seemed to the author to merit careful examination, which he has given to the subject, as will be seen by reference to the appendix. As the southwest of England seemed the natural habitat of the Chaffin race and was close to Wales, doubtless Chaffin families inhabited both countries.

As several Chaffin families are reported to have lived in New England before the appearance of Robert, who begins our Chaffin history, it was natural to conjecture that he was not an emigrant but sprang from one of these families. There is not, however, the least evidence that this was the case. The records regarding those early families are very meagre, uncertain and unsatisfactory. The subject has been carefully investigated by the author and his conclusions are stated in his account of the earliest New England Chaffins in the appendix. It is sufficient to say here that no Robert appears in any mention of their children. It is possible that he may have come from England with the Virginia family and be kindred to them, and have drifted to Massachusetts later, but there is no evidence to confirm any such supposition. Our first sight of him is in Concord, Mass., in 1719, when he married Abigail Davis.

FAMILY CHARACTERISTICS

While the author is rather proud to be a Chaffin he does not claim any remarkable talents or achievements for the family. None of its members has attained any extraordinary distinction in science or literature, art or statesmanship, war or business. But, what is better, they have taken high rank for character, worthy living, and wholesome, helpful influence in the communities where they have lived. The author has personally known quite a number of its members, and has, by means of an extensive correspondence been in communication with nearly all of the adults now living, and he has never found one of them in the criminal courts or guilty of any actionable offense, but he has heard of two or three of them who deserved a good thrashing. Physically they have had the reputation of being a fine looking race. The specimens known to the writer have justified this reputation. But as over seventy of their faces will look upon the reader from these pages, nothing more need be said upon this point; he can form his own opinion. Some of the families have been unusually stalwart and vigorous, over six feet in height, with broad shoulders and deep chests, capable of enduring exceptionable labor and hardship. See, for example, Orin P. Chaffin, who on a wager of fifty dollars chopped six cords and three feet of wood in nine hours and forty minutes, an astonishing feat of strength and endurance.

There are three rather marked peculiarities of the family that have impressed themselves upon the writer. One is a rather exceptional courtesy, a refinement of manner, a natural gentility. He has noted this peculiarity in nearly all the Chaffins he has seen. The men were gentlemen, the women ladies. And this impression has been emphasized by the spirit manifested in the extensive correspondence he has carried on with members of the family. They have borne his epistolary assaults with commendable patience and courtesy.

The men of the family have shown remarkable enterprise. About a century ago several of the families, dissatisfied with the limited New England opportunities, started to the then "West," which meant New York State and Ohio, and their energetic children and grandchildren pushed on and on, ever westward, settling in various western states, stopped only by the Pacific Ocean. Many of them showed exceptional business ability and made excellent successes in their various enterprises. The Chaffins have not taken much to literary callings or to artistic pursuits but have engaged extensively in farming and in business careers, a few of them, however, becoming lawyers and more of them physicians.

Originality and independency in religious thinking has been one of the manifest traits of the family. The rigid Calvinism of early New England, represented by Jonathan Edward's horrible sermon, "Sinners in the hands of an angry God," excited their dissent, and under the lead of Channing and Ballou quite a number of them became Unitarians and Universalists. In the West this rebellion against Calvinistic orthodoxy led many of them to join the so-called Christian denomination, which pleaded for Christian Unity as against sectarianism, its motto, "In opinions liberty, in right living unity." Of course some of them became connected with other churches, Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, and one able Chaffin, provoked by what he regarded as an unjust persecution of the Mormons, joined their ranks but did not become a polygamist. Only three Chaffins in these two hundred years have become ministers of the Gospel, and one of them left the ministry for perhaps a larger field of usefulness. A political career does not seem to have attracted them. One of them, it is true, was in 1908 a candidate for the presidency of the country, and has recently been renominated for the position. This was not, however, with any political aspirations, but rather to represent the cause of party Prohibition. He shows that he is not wanting in the sense of humor by promising that he "will not run for a third term."

Reference to the earlier generations of the family will show that the family was devotedly patriotic, many of our ancestors serving in the Revolutionary War, as their descendants have done in the Civil War and Spanish War. On the whole, the Chaffins have reason to be proud of their race in this country, and they should endeavor to maintain the fine reputation the family has earned for integrity, ability and clean, wholesome and helpful living.

ROBERT CHAFFIN AND HIS

FIRST GENERATION

The compiler of a most elaborately written genealogy of a distinguished family in England, with distinguished descendants in America, claimed for it a royal lineage, tracing it back through Saxon Kings and ancient heroes to Noah, the builder of the Ark! Why, having gone so far back, he should not have filled up the gap between Noah and Adam does not appear. The author of this Chaffin History makes no such claim of royal lineage or extreme antiquity for his family. On the contrary, after the most painstaking investigation he is obliged to confess his ignorance of the ancestry, parentage, date of birth and date of death of ROBERT CHAFFIN, with whom this American family begins. Robert is, in fact, "after the order of Melchisedec, without father, without mother, without descent,* having neither beginning of days, nor end of life." But while the exact date of birth and of death of Robert is not known, there is ground for reasonable conjecture as to the time when these important events occurred. He emerges from his obscurity and presents himself first to his descendants when he leads his bride, Abigail Davis, not to the altar, but to the lawyer's office, where Justice Minot hears their marriage vows and pronounces them "husband and wife." The date of this union is April 15, 1719, and the place the old and interesting town of Concord, Mass. Abigail was twenty years old at that date, and the probability is that Robert was a little older, and that he was, therefore, born about 1695. We can be a little more definite as to the date of his death. The inventory of his estate was ordered on Feb. 15, 1745, so that there is little doubt that he died towards the end of 1744.

Of Abigail Davis something more definite is known. She was born in Concord, Mass., Jan. 22, 1699, dau. of Samuel and Abigail

*The Revised Version translates this word "genealogy"; another rendering is "pedigree." For the whole passage see Hebrews, VII, 3.

(Reed) Davis, and died probably early in 1752, as on Feb. 21, 1752, two of her children, of whom she was the guardian, petitioned to have another guardian appointed and we do not hear of her after this date. The Chaffin family may congratulate themselves in thus inheriting from Abigail some share of the Davis blood, for from it have sprung three governors of Massachusetts, two members of Congress, two presidents of Harvard College, Capt. Isaac Davis killed in the Concord fight, and many others as worthy if not so well known. Hon. John Davis Long, one of the governors alluded to, has kindly furnished a sketch of the Davis family which may be found in the Appendix.

For a short time after his marriage Robert Chaffin lived in Stowe, near Concord. This appears from the statement in a deed under date of May 11, 1722, which describes the purchase by Robert from David Russell of Littleton for "sixty pounds in current money," of two parcels of land, meadow and upland, "eighty acres more or less." In this deed Robert is named as "a husbandman" living in Stowe. A few months later he is called "of Concord" in a deed dated Feb. 14, 1723, which describes another purchase of land, "in a place commonly called Nashobe within the village or new grant belonging to the town of Concord in the N. W. part of that town." This part was soon called Littleton. There Robert cleared the land, cultivated his farm and raised his family. Shortly after his death, late in 1744, his oldest son, John, was appointed administrator of the estate. In the settlement, besides what went to the widow, each child was awarded £6, 8s, 1-5d.

Reference has been made to the inventory of the estate. It included even the most trivial objects, such as a little "puter and brass." Some of these items are given here for the sake of the interesting spelling. "Wearing apperil, bed and beding, table linning, iorn ware one pot and kittle, eartharn ware and other small Housel vessels, a tabel and chars, sider barels, iorn crows, one yoak and one draft chane, a syder press, a grinston, yearn in the Hous, an old bearn (barn), Rie in the bearn, one Hors, two swine, one acor of orcherding, six acors plow land, one steare, two yearlands, seven bearl of Syder," besides many other articles.

Chaffin

But alas! in 1746, not very long after the appraisal of the estate, the house caught fire and was consumed, "with a considerable part of the housed Goods"; and the appraisers, Peter Reed, John Powers and Abram Patch issued a statement regarding this misfortune in which they say, "We find that it amounts to fifty-seven pound six shilling it is to be understood that the charity of the people have considered there lose that there is now lost £57, 6s, 0, old tenor." What is meant by "the charity of the people have considered there lose," etc., is, to say the least, ambiguous. Children of Robert and Abigail:

- 2 i. JOHN, b. March 5, 1720; d. March 5, 1771.
- ii. MARY, b. Dec. 7, 1721; d. Aug. 23, 1758; m. abt. 1746 David Keyes, son of Moses Jr. and Susanna (Stratton) of Concord, Mass. Children born in Acton: 1. Samuel, b. Oct. 29, 1747. 2. Mary, b. June 8, 1749; d. Aug. 17, 1758. 3. John, b. Oct. 6, 1753; d. Aug. 17, 1758. 4. David, b. Nov. 29, 1754; d. Aug. 10, 1758.
- iii. ROBERT, b. Jan. 11, 1723; d. the next year.
- 3 iv. ROBERT, b. Dec. 20, 1724; d. March 13, 1775.
- v. ABIGAIL, b. Feb. 3, 1727; d. March 13, 1729.
- vi. ABIGAIL, b. March 13, 1729; d. the same day as her sister.
- 4 vii. FRANCIS, b. Jan. 25, 1730; d. Jan. 28, 1778.
- 5 ix. SAMUEL, b. May 3, 1732; d. Nov. 20, 1811.
- 6 x. TIMOTHY, b. March 7, 1734; d. July 25, 1838.
- xi. PHEBE, b. March 4, 1737; m. Benjamin Mead. It was probably this family of whom we have the following interesting account. "During the Revolutionary War the old place (where Benjamin Mead and his family lived) was raided by a party of the British and Tories. Obadiah, son of Benjamin, was then quite a lad. His sisters, Anna and Phebe, who were younger, hid with their mother in the cellar of the old house as the Redcoats marched up the road, and their father and the older girls, Mary and Theodosia, barricaded the doors and windows, while obediah, the only son, solicitous for the cattle without, drove them into the farm yard and then beat a hasty retreat to a neighbor's farm."

SECOND GENERATION

JOHN (Robert 1) b. in Littleton, Mass., March 5, 1720; d. in Acton, Mass., March 5, 1771, the oldest child of the emigrant Robert and the first Chaffin of this line born in America. After the death of his father, in 1745, John lived for awhile in Littleton, where his first child was born. Inheriting part of his father's estate, he added to it by the purchase of considerable land in Acton, on the west of the town, joining Littleton. There, in 1749 or 1750, he built his house, which is still standing and is the oldest Chaffin house in the country.* On March 25, 1747, he m. Ellin Barrett (probate records call her Eleanor), b. in Littleton, June 17, 1723; d. in Hancock, N. H., Jan. 2, 1815. In the final settlement of John Chaffin's estate, the oldest son, Jonathan, was awarded two-thirds of the real estate, and the widow one-third, Jonathan to pay for the support of the other children and their mother; the whole estate valued at £322. Children of John and Ellin (Eleanor):

- i. ELLIN, b. in Littleton, May 24, 1749; m. 1st, Oct. 23, 1770, Jacob Gilbert. He must have died soon, because at the time of the settlement of her father's estate, not very long after his death in 1771, she is called in the probate records "the oldest daughter, Eleanor Matthews," the wife of Paul Matthews. But in 1803 she is again a widow and (int.) Oct. 7, 1803, she m. 3d G. David Poor and in legal papers she is "Elinor Poor of Winchendon, the wife of David Poor." She was in W. as late as July, 1820, and signs herself Ellin.

FRANCIS (Robert 1) b. in Littleton, Mass., Jan. 25, 1730; d. at Valley Forge, Jan. 28, 1778. His father d. before he was sixteen years old and at 18 years of age, with the consent of his guardian, Henry Hale, he was bound out to his brother John, "a housewright," for 3 years or until he should come of age. He lived in Acton, a farmer. He was on the list of men, April 22, 1757, in Capt. Samuel Davis' Acton Military Company, and possibly saw service in the French and Indian War, but no record of it appears. He was a Revolutionary soldier, a private in Capt. Asahel Wheeler's Co., Col. John Robinson's regt.; marched Feb. 4, 1776; service 1 mo., 28 days. Also corporal, Capt. Joshua Brown's Co., Col. Timothy Bigelow's regt.; Continental Army pay accounts for service from April 26, 1777, to Jan. 28, 1778, at which date he died at Valley Forge; in one account reported to have died of smallpox. Francis m., April 20, 1756, Rebecca Cummings of Littleton. Children, born in Acton:

- i. FRANCIS, b. Feb. 21, 1757, of whom, apart from his Revolutionary record, not much is known. He was, however, living in Boxborough as late as 1793. Apparently he was a town charge there at that date, since the following occurs on the Boxborough town records: "May 8, 1793, One order to Bennett Wood for Ephraim Turner and Francis Chaffin—Rate that they was offered in said wood rate left and abated by the town, one pound 17, 6." It is not unlikely that he was disabled in his military service in the Revolutionary War, which was as follows: "Marched from Acton to Roxbury March 4, 1776; service 4 days; also, Capt. John Minot's Co., Col. Dike's regt.; pay abstract for wages and travel allowance on march to and from Dorchester Heights; warrant allowed in Council, Nov. 30, 1776; also return of men enlisted into Continental Army from Capt. Simon Hunt's Co., Col. Eleazer Brooks' regt., dated Sept. 5, 1777; residence Acton; enlisted for the town of Acton; joined Capt. Munrow's Co., Col. Bigelow's regt.; enlistment 3 years or during war; also, muster roll for Jan.-Aug., 1777, dated Van Shaick's Island; enlisted April 26, 1777; enlistment 3 years; reported attending the sick at Sharon." The military service of Francis Chaffin, father and son, is reported in the same paragraph in the "Mass. Soldiers and Sailors in the war of the Revolution," and there may be some doubt as to which Francis several of the items belong to. But both enlisted for 3 years, and the father died Jan. 28, 1778.
- ii. ABIGAIL, b. July 6, 1759; m. 1782, John Whitcomb, b. in Leominster, Mass., May 20, 1759; d. in Easton, N. H., in 1813. He was a Revolutionary soldier and settled after his marriage on Lot 7, Sixth Range, in Lisbon, N. H. After 1794 he removed to Canada, but after awhile returned and lived in Easton, a town next to Lisbon. Children, b. in Lisbon: 1. John, b. Jan. 7, 1783. 2. Francis, b. Jan. 28, 1786. 3. Samuel, b. June 1, 1788. 4. Abigail, b. Dec. 7, 1791. 5. Benjamin and 6. Josiah, twins, b. May 1, 1794.

iii. SAMUEL, b. May 28, 1761.

- 17 iv. DANIEL, b. Nov. 9, 1763. The following family tradition deserves noting even if unsupported by evidence. "Reuben Chaffin had two brothers who were shipping cattle at the time of the Revolutionary War. When they were robbed of their cattle they joined the navy under Paul Jones; were captured by the English, taken to Calcutta and were killed or died in prison, the Black Hole Prison. One of these was named Daniel; both enlisted from New Hampshire." The other brother was Samuel. It is a pity to spoil so good a story, but it will be remembered that the English did not capture Paul Jones' sailors, for they always got whipped when they tackled Paul Jones. More than that the Black Hole in Calcutta tragedy occurred several years before Samuel and Daniel Chaffin were born, that is in 1756. There is some reason to believe that Samuel was living somewhere in Cheshire Co., N. H., in 1790, for at that time the U. S. Census has the following: "Samuel Chaffin family: One male over sixteen; one male under sixteen and five females." Now as all the other Samuel Chaffins can be otherwise accounted for this Samuel is probably the one noted in the census above, and shows him with a family of seven, including himself.

vi. REBECCA, b. April 30, 1768.

SAMUEL (Robert 1) b. in Littleton, Mass., May 3, 1732; d. in Holden, Nov. 20, 1811. He had a noteworthy record in the French and Indian War, seeing some very hard service. He enlisted first Sept. 15, 1755, and served until Dec. 16, 13 weeks and 2 days—and allowed for 14 days' travel from Albany to Charlestown.

He was later a private in Capt. Thomas Cheever's Co., in the expedition against Crown Point; marched to Lake George, and continued in service until the army disbanded. He was taken sick at Fort Edward, and had to hire a horse and man to bring him home, and had the cost of nursing; petitioned the Governor and House of Representatives for an allowance, and on Feb. 24, 1756, was given £6, 14s, 4d. On his journey home, when he reached Sheffield, his father, Robert Chaffin, met him, and nursed him for six weeks, for which he charged £2, 13, 4, which is included in the above bill.

Samuel was on the muster roll as sergeant in Capt. Seth Blodgett's Co., Col. Wm. Battle's regt., and marched for the relief of Fort William Henry, Aug. 16, 1757; marched from Lexington to Springfield, 165 miles, time 12 days.

Samuel was also a Revolutionary soldier. Retaining the rank of sergeant, which he earned in the F. and I. War by honorable service, he enlisted on the first opportunity, serving in Maj. Paul Raymond's Co. in the First Worcester regt.; marching "on the alarm" to Cambridge, April 19, 1775; service 8½ days.

Later, although over fifty-nine years old, he enlisted Aug. 9, 1781, in Capt. Jonathan Sibley's Co., Col. Luke Drury's regt., serving as sergeant. He arrived in camp Aug. 22, and was discharged Nov. 21, 1781, service 3 mos., 23 days, travel included—residence Rutland, Mass., for which town he enlisted for three years.

Samuel was a cooper by trade and he lived in Holden, Mass., where his first four children were born, and afterwards he lived in Rutland, the home of his second wife. He was in Ashburnham, Mass., as early as 1771, and sometime later he appears to have gone to Claremont, N. H. He was a soldier in the French and Indian War as well as in the Revolutionary War. In 1754 he was in Capt. Phineas Osgood's Company of Col. John Winslow's regt. from May 31 to Sept. 13, 3 mo., 3 w. and 1 d., and is called a "Centinel." This was "for the defense of the Eastern frontiers." For this service he was paid a bounty. (See Mass. Archives, vol. 93, p. 139.) He was also, April 22, 1757, on the muster roll of Capt. Samuel Davis' Company of Acton (Ibid, vol. 95, p. 321).

complexion. On May 17, 1782, he was paid a bounty, and was of "Class No. 2" of the town of Acton, to serve in the Continental Army for the term of three years.

He m. June 2, 1786, Miriam Hayward, dau. of John and Miriam, b. Feb. 8, 1766; d. before 1825. Middlesex Co. probate records have a statement under date of Sept. 6, 1825, that Stephen died and "Left no widow or heirs." This statement greatly embarrassed the compiler of this genealogy, who had reason to believe that Stephen and Miriam left at least a son and namesake, Stephen, who settled in Maine. The matter was at last explained by H. F. Tuttle, town clerk of Acton, who, in looking over Acton church records, found the following, a record of baptism:

" May 4, 1794, STEPHEN	} 4 children of Stephen and Miriam Chaffin,
BETSEY
RUTH HAYWARD
JOHN

also, Oct. 2, 1803, record of baptism of MIRIAM, dau. of Stephen and Miriam Chaffin."

The children named above are undoubtedly in the order of their births—the first one, Stephen, being born in less than two years after his parents' marriage. What became of the son, Stephen, will appear farther on, but of the other children we know nothing. They may have died young, as in 1825 probate records pronounce them non-existent. But we are sure of the following record:

35 i. STEPHEN, b. 1788; d. May 26, 1851, in Hampden, Me.

EPHRAIM (Robert 3), b. in Acton, Mass., Sept. 24, 1760, where he lived the first part of his adult life. He was a Revolutionary soldier, enlisting when he was but seventeen years old, Sept. 24, 1777, a private in Col. John Buttrick's Co. of Volunteers in Col. Reed's regt.; discharged Nov. 7, 1777, service 1 mo. and 11 days, at the taking of Gen. Burgoyne. This co. was detached from Col. Brooks' regt. to reinforce the army of Gen. Gates at the northward. By the census of 1790 he is seen to be living in Cheshire Co., N. H., in Chesterfield. He lived there until 1804, when he sold out and located in Alexandria, Jefferson Co., N. Y., following his brother, Peter, who had settled in Lorraine in that county. He married in Harvard, Mass., May 3, 1786, Sarah Hill, b. March 19, 1766, dau. of Samuel and Sarah. SIMON (Robert 3) b. Sept. 27, 1764, in Acton, Mass.; d. Aug. 8, 1837, in East Union Township, Ohio. He m., March 7, 1786, Mercy Sanderson of Littleton. She was born Feb. 3, 1768, and d. Jan. 13, 1854; dau. of Moses and Mary (Flagg). Simon was a blacksmith. His shop was in front of where the Acton Monument stands. He dug the well at the town pump. On Aug. 9, 1804, he bought 75 acres of land in Union, Maine, and with his wife and four children he took up his residence there, remaining until late in 1811, when he started for the West with his family, selling his 75 acres of land in Union on Sept. 11, 1811. Three other children were born in Union. Starting for a new home among strangers he thought it important to take with him a certificate of good character, as appears from the following, which was found among his old papers:

“Union, state of Maine, Sept. 18, 1811. This may certify that Mr. Simon Chaffin has lived in this town for eight or ten years past, during which time he has, so far as ever came to our knowledge, sustained the character of an upright, fair dealer, and of good moral character, and very industrious and good blacksmith, signed: Nathan Robbins, Joel Adams, Select men of Union.”

Shortly after the above date he started with his family, consisting of his wife and six children and his son-in-law, Obediah Luce, and journeyed to Ohio. They went in a four-horse wagon, traveling for fifty-seven days, a distance of 1050 miles, never unloading the wagon until he reached Poland, Trumbull Co., Ohio. There he remained until the winter of 1812-13, when he removed to lands he had purchased of Isaac Poe and John Nagle. They had bought the same of Winn Winship, and concerning his right to sell said lands the following interesting statement tells the story:

“Whereas the Congress of the United States granted to the State of Ohio certain lands for the use of schools in the Virginia Military District, the Assembly of the State of Ohio aforesaid appointed Winn Winship to lease and dispose of said lands according to certain acts of the legislature of the State of Ohio concerning the aforesaid lands.”

The aforesaid Isaac Poe and John Nagle of Wayne Co., for $65.00 sold their right and interest in the north half of Section No. 10 in Township No. 16 of Range No. 12, 80 acres, to Simon Chaffin. That these lands rapidly appreciated in value is evident from the fact that only a few years after this purchase Simon sold a part of this 80 acres on Dec. 12, 1826, to his son, Gladwin, for $300.00.

On Sept. 5, 1814, the township of East Union was formed, and this name was suggested by Simon Chaffin in recollection of his home in Union, Maine, and was adopted by the inhabitants. The first white man to die there was Vesta Frary, and Simon Chaffin helped to lay him out and to dig his grave. Mr. and Mrs. Chaffin were both members of the Methodist Church and meetings were held in their house. The Rev. Harroy O. Sheldon was the M. E. presiding elder and a good specimen of a muscular Christian. He could carry a barrel of salt or a barrel of cider with ease. On one occasion at a campmeeting two drunken men disturbed the assembly and the Rev. Sheldon choked them into silence. As before stated, Simon d. Aug. 8, 1837, and Mercy, his wife, Jan. 13, 1854. PETER (Robert 3), b. in Acton, Mass., 1766; m., March 20, 1787, Mary Whitney of Stowe, Mass. He lived in Stowe awhile after his marriage, his first son, Daniel, being born there. But his home most of the time until 1795 was in Acton. At this date, however, he purchased land in Chesterfield, N. H., as also in 1798. Later than that, in 1802, he moved to Lorraine, Jefferson Co., N. Y. The destruction of the early Jefferson Co. probate records and records of deeds by fire has made it very difficult to get exact information relative to Peter's settlement and his family record. The compiler has, however, done his best to get the needed data. Peter's date of death and that of his wife is not known, but both deaths were prior to 1850. Children:

- 41 i. DANIEL, b. in Stowe, Mass., Dec. 15, 1787; d. Aug. 27, 1854, in Lorraine.
- 42 ii. ROBERT, date and place of birth unknown; d. in Lorraine abt. 1835.

Ora G. Chaffin states that this Peter, his great grandfather, had also three daughters, Charlotte, Polly and Betsey.

GLADWIN (Robert 3), b. Nov. 20, 1768, in Acton, Mass.; d. Feb. 10, 1813, in Harvard; m. Dec. 30, 1789, Eunice Farwell, b. Mar. 17, 1763, in Harvard; d. Jan. 13, 1813, and in less than a month the sadly bereaved husband followed her. Gladwin's homestead and farm were on the road from Harvard to Still River abt. a mile from the Centre. The old house is not there; a shop is built over the cellar where it stood. The land beyond his home was called the "Goose Pasture," and they used to raise geese there. The gravestone that marks the last resting place of Gladwin and Eunice in the cemetery near the church, although now almost a hundred years old, is still firm and strong, a very solid and elaborate memorial of slatestone three and a half feet high by two and a half feet broad. It is elaborately carved on the front, representing an urn shaded by a willow. Below it is this inscription:

"The dust and ruins that remain
 Are precious in our eyes;
 These ruins shall be built again
 And all this dust shall rise."

an inscription that expresses the belief of the resurrection of the body, a belief now largely outgrown and discarded. The children of Gladwin and Eunice were:

- i BETSEY, b. Feb. 22, 1790; d. Mar. 19, 1839; m. May 22, 1817, John Hill, Jr., who d. Apr. 26, 1835. Children:
 1. Albert Chaffin, b. in Harvard, Apr. 28, 1818, of whom not much is known. He lived to manhood but never married. 2. Joseph Chaffin Appleton, b. in Harvard, Jan. 21, 1821. At the age of 20 years he went to Concord, N. H., where he had relatives, and entered the employ of Franklin Evans, and later the partnership of Evans and Hill was formed, which continued until Mr. Hill went to California in 1864, as agent of the great coach and carriage manufactory of Abbott & Downing of Concord, N. H. He returned to Concord in 1873, where he lived until his death, which occurred Mar. 14, 1901. He m. Sept. 25, 1850, Ellen Downing of Concord, b. July 28, 1828, dau. of Lewis and Lucy (Wheelock) and at this date (Oct., 1912) she is still living. Mr. Hill was a very public spirited citizen; one of the most useful and helpful of men. For many years he was a member of the school board, clerk of Ward Six a number of years, a representative in the state legislature for two years, county commissioner for three years, a justice of the peace over twenty years. He took an ardent interest in the N. H. Centennial Home for the Aged, was elected its treasurer, and for 25 years successfully managed its affairs.

The Proctor Academy of Andover, N. H., was another institution he was deeply interested in, being president of the board of trustees. He was a devoted Unitarian and a most helpful member of the Unitarian Church in Concord—early becoming a teacher in the Sunday School, and for years its superintendent. It is interesting to note that he and four other intimate friends formed an association they called the Mystic Five, which met annually on New Years Eve for 50 years, celebrating the dying year with a supper. At the fiftieth meeting it was voted to discontinue the gatherings, and one of the five died soon after. The last meeting was Dec. 31, 1893, at Young's Hotel, Boston. Mr. Hill was the latest survivor.

- ii. SALLY, b. Apr. 5, 1791, in Harvard; m. Sept. 29, 1816, Jonathan B. Symonds of Hanover, N. H., b. in Harvard Mar. 20, 1791. He soon settled in Concord, N. Like many other families that come from England, the Chaffin family for many years entertained the pleasing tradition of an immense fortune held for them in the Bank of England, subject to call and sure to be turned over to them when sufficient evidence of ownership could be produced. This fiction has not yet died out. The author of this Chaffin History has been questioned about it by correspondents who seem dazzled by the brilliant prospect of such an addition to their cash as would enable them to buy the most expensive automobiles and live henceforth at ease. The subject is referred to here only to say that the Andrew Symonds spoken of above was being trained in the law mainly as a preparation for going to England and claiming this great fortune. An early death saved him from this foolish quest. Mrs. Symonds m. 2d, at Oxford, W. B. Norton, his 2d marriage. - 45 vi. JOHN FARWELL, b. May 17, 1798, in Harvard; d. Feb. 9, 1862, in Concord, N. H.

- vii. NANCY CLEVERLY, b. in Harvard, Apr. 13, 1801; d. Dec. 2, 1880, in Concord, N. H.; m. Oct. 6, 1822, in Harvard, Hosea Fessenden, b. in Halifax, Vt., Mar. 15, 1796; s. of Solomon and Betsey (Tucker), d. Mar. 28, 1871, in Concord, N. H. He had learned the saddlery and harness business in Keene, N. H., and in 1819, he moved to Concord and started in this business, which he carried on successfully for many years, and continued at it until his death. Many apprentices learned their trade of him, all of whom learned to respect him as a kind and just employer and a man of sterling integrity. He was one of the earliest members of the Unitarian Church of Concord, being the seventh signer of the articles of incorporation. He united with the church "as a professing Christian," May 1, 1831, was elected deacon June 3, 1832, and served as such for seventeen years. In 1823 he took the Master's degree in the Blazing Star Lodge of Masons. In 1826 he was made a Royal Arch Mason of Trinity Chapter, and held important offices in the New Hampshire Masonic order, for many years being Grand Treasurer of the order in the State. He was a noble type of manhood. Nancy Chaffin, who became his wife, was a most fitting helpmeet for Mr. Fessenden. "She looked well to the ways of her household," was most hospitable, entertaining many friends and relatives, sometimes averaging for a long time as many as a dozen persons about her generously provided table. The writer of this notice, her nephew and adopted son, regards her as coming as near realizing the highest ideal of Christian womanhood as any person he has ever known, and he is glad to bear this testimony to her Christian character, and to her motherly kindness and devotion to him, as to all her children, through all her years. She was most self-sacrificing, but the pleasure she took in helping others turned self-sacrifice into joy. She was very kind and helpful to the poor, and in those days before trained nurses, she watched many nights at the bedside of the sick even after a hard day's work at home. She was most prayerful and devout in her religious faith and ardent in her attachment to her church. The writer well remembers the loving reverence with which,

as the deacon's wife, she would prepare the bread and wine for the Lord's Supper; and he used to go with her, when a small boy, and carry these memorials for her, and watch her as she arranged them on the table for the coming service. Religion was as necessary and natural to her as breathing. She illustrated Father Taylor's remark, who, when someone spoke of the loveliness of the angels, replied with feeling, "Folks are better than angels." Children: 1. Sarah Jane, b. Dec. 10, 1825; d. July 13, 1838; so remarkable a child in the strength and beauty of her religious faith that her minister, the Rev. Moses G. Thomas, of saintly memory, wrote a touching account of her in a pamphlet of thirty pages. 2. Henry Gladwin, b. Oct. 28, 1828; d. Feb. 11, 1837. 3. Eliza Tucker, b. Oct. 22, 1831; m. Sept. 8, 1853, George Edwin Todd, b. Feb. 6, 1830, at Cambridge, Mass.; d. Nov. 16, 1892, in Concord, N. H.; son of Moses and Rebecca (Turner). He came to Concord in 1848 and entered the service of the Northern N. H. R. R., first as clerk, then as paymaster and master of transportation, and finally, in 1866, as superintendent. He was in 1878 chosen as one of the directors of the R. R. He was elected and served for two years as a member of the N. H. House of Representatives, and also for two years in the N. H. Senate, being elected on the Republican ticket. Mr. Todd was a man of incorruptable character, capable and judicious in his business management, and faithful to every trust reposed in him. Mr. and Mrs. Todd had one child, Carrie Rebecca, b. Aug. 15, 1858, and living with her mother, who is a woman whose fine character, intelligence and helpful life have won the respect and esteem of all who know her. 4. Nancy Chaffin, b. Dec. 25, 1833; d. June 15, 1895, in Concord. 5. John Henry, b. Oct. 13, 1838, a born business man, more fond as a boy of catching horn-pouts, pickerel and eels and shooting squirrels, than of studying lessons in school, which he abandoned early in order to enter upon a business career. He had such a genius for "dickering" that it was said of him that he would borrow a jack-knife of another boy in the morning, go "swapping" round during the day and come back at night with the borrowed knife, which he returned to the owner, and with another that he gained by his trading. The writer does not vouch for the truth of this story, but it well illustrates his genius. At the age of 17 years he became a clerk in a drug store in Boston at $3.00 per week, which position he left for the funny reason that his employer accused him of killing some small pet alligators by throwing ashes in their aquarium, though he afterward discovered that the deed was done by his head clerk. Young Fessenden then took a place as clerk in the shoe store of his cousin, Henry Bateman, at $4.00 a week, and afterwards in the wholesale boot and shoe store of Drury, Fairbanks & Co., where with a salary of $500 he became head clerk. He was soon offered $800, but preferred to "go west." He landed in Cincinnati and there established the business of manufacturing toilet soaps. But then came the opening of the Civil War and the call for troops. He enlisted at once, and put a notice on his factory door, "Not to be reopened until the end of the war." He was appointed 2d lieutenant, became a recruiting agent and soon reported to Capt. Johnson, Co. K, 75th Regiment of Ohio Volunteers. His service for awhile was in West Virginia, under Generals Milroy, Schenck and Fremont. He was in the battles of Bull Mountain, Cross Keys and the second Bull Run: and with his comrades chased, and was chased by Stonewall Jackson up and down the Luray and Shenandoah valleys; was in Pope's forced march down the Rappahannock, and after the 2d Bull Run battle was down with rheumatic fever, which brought him apparently near death's door, forced him to resign, and disabled him for over a year. Then, after a clerkship for awhile in a wholesale boot and shoe store, he went into business for himself in Knoxville, Tenn., remaining there until the end of the war. He then entered the employ, as traveling salesman, of Solon Palmer, who sold flavoring extracts, etc., and he so increased the trade that Mr. Palmer doubled his working force and established a flourishing business in New York City. After four years with Solon Palmer, Mr. Fessenden went into the house furnishing business in Sioux City, Ia. He remained some years there and then, thinking he could make more money buying and selling mining claims, he went to Colorado, where he acquired some valuable mining property which he still holds. But the Colorado climate is hard on rheumatic persons, and his physician advised him to go south. This took him to Florida, where he settled and where he has since been for nearly 30 years. Twenty-six years ago he located in Tampa and has been and still is doing a prosperous business in real estate there. "All's well that ends well," and this checkered business career finds Mr. Fessenden a man of means secured by his own business ability. He has, notwithstanding some business setbacks, always paid his debts and has the deserved reputation of being an honest, upright and capable business man. It deserves telling, that as a boy, Mr. Fessenden had a passion for guns and pistols, and the smell of gunpowder was ambrosial to his nostrils. He became an expert marksman whom no one could surpass. While in military service a captain in a regiment encamped near the one he belonged to heard of him and wanted to bet that a gunner in his own regiment could beat him. The challenge was accepted for Lieut. Fessenden by his captain. But when the challenger heard that on the morning of the day when the trial was to be made Lieut. Fessenden had been out and with a revolver had shot off the heads of enough robins to provide a meal for his officer's mess, he came and begged to have the bet called off, saying he couldn't compete with a man who could shoot off the heads of robins with a revolver.

vi, vii. SAMUEL and ISAAC were two other sons of Samuel and Abigail. Not very much is known of them. Samuel lived in Canada. One of the sons, and it was probably Samuel, engaged in the business of smuggling goods between Canada and the United States, and was shot and killed while so engaged. Isaac in his young days was much in England. He once gave to one of his sisters a chest that he brought from that country. His sister gave it to a nephew, Isaac Whitney, whose widow still has it in her possession. George Kimball, son of Candace Cecilia and grandson of Samuel and Abigail, said that his mother told him she had besides the brothers named above, another brother whose name was George, who died in Canada about the time of the War of 1812. Other descendants of Samuel do not remember about any George, and it is possible George Kimball may have confounded him with Samuel, the smuggler.

"During my service I had rare opportunities of meeting some of the most prominent generals of both North and South, having enlisted in Texas in 1860, after the Indians had killed my partner and slaves on a cattle ranch we had purchased and had just settled on. The Indians having run off all the stock, and burned the cabin with all the wealth it contained, I wanted to 'get satisfaction.' The commander of the regiment was Lt. Col. Robert E. Lee, and the Senior Major was George H. Thomas. Nearly all the officers of the regiment were given high positions in one or the other of the armies. DAVID (Timothy 6), b. in Holden, Mass., Oct. 7, 1761; d. July 25, 1838, in Claremont, N. H. He was a soldier of the Revolution and became a pensioner after the war. In the application for his pension it is stated that he was one of the guards of Major André and within ten feet of him when he was executed at Tappan, N. Y., Oct. 2, 1780. He enlisted as a substitute for his father, who was drafted, and joined Capt. Nathaniel Carter's Co., Col. Job Cushing's (Worcester Co.) Regt., Sept. 7, 1777 (then not quite 16 years old), and discharged Oct. 22; service 1 mo., 24 days including travel at the northward; marched to Bennington, Stillwater, and there joined the main army and was at Burgoyne's surrender; roll dated Leominster. He was also a Fatigue man under Capt. Henry Wilson three months at Castle William and Governor's Island. He enlisted June 25, 1778, in Capt. Benj. Edgell's Co. and again Capt. Eli Jackson's Co., Col. John Jacob's Regt., and was also on a muster roll dated Freetown, Sept. 13, 1778, the enlistment to expire on Jan. 1, 1779. It was during this period of service that he was one of the guards of Maj. André.

Later than this David was on a "List of men for six months service"; passed muster in a return dated Camp Totaway, Oct. 25, 1780. Even at this time, after three years of service, he had 1780; d. Apr. 10, 1852, soon after her husband's death. He was a carpenter, builder and pump-maker by trade. A great granddaughter describes him as "tall, slim, sandy haired, intelligent, and as an old man dignified and courteous." Hon. John D. Long, who was born in Buckfield and knew him, says he was a "quaint and original character," and he tells the following story of him, which he says "was very familiar in Buckfield in my boyhood. One day he went down the cellar stairs with a pitcher for cider. On the way down he fell and nearly broke his neck, but held the pitcher aloft and saved it. His wife, hearing the noise, sang out, 'Mr. Chaffin, have you broke that pitcher?' He, angry at her caring more for the pitcher than for his neck, sang back, 'No, but by —— I will,' and dashed it to pieces against the cellar wall."

Holman day, a Maine poet, has dressed up this incident in his poem, "Aunt Shaw's Pet Jug." He disguises the actors in it under the names of Uncle Nathan and Aunt Shaw. He describes how Uncle Nathan, at half past four in the afternoon would "Take the big blue jug from the but'ry shelf

And trot down cellar, to draw himself
Old cider enough to last him through
The winter ev'nin'. Two quarts would do."

As often as he did this he would hear Aunt Shaw's complaint:

"'Now Nathan, for goodness' sake take care!
You allus trip on the second stair;
It seems as though you were just possessed
To break that jug. It's the very best
There is in town and you know it, too;
And 'twas left to me by my great-Aunt Sue.
For goodness' sake why don't yer lug
A tin dish down, for ye'll break that jug.'"

"One day he slipped on that second stair,
Whirled round and grabbed at the empty air,
And clean to the foot of them stairs, ker-smack,
He bumped on the buge of his humped old back,
And he'd hardly finished the final bump
When old Aunt Shaw she giv' a jump
And screamed down stairs as mad's a bug,
'Dod-rot your hide, did ye break my jug?'
Poor Unce Nathan lay there flat,
Knocked in the shape of an old cocked hat.
But he rubbed his legs, brushed off the dirt
And found after all that he wasn't much hurt.
And he'd saved the jug, for his last wild thought
Had been of that; he might have caught
At the cellar shelves and saved his fall,
But he kept his hands on the jug through all.

FREDERIKA N. LEWIS

ABBY A. LEWIS

And now as he loosed his jealous hug,
 His wife just screamed, 'Did ye break my jug?'
 Not a single word for his poor old bones;
 Not a word when she heard his awful groans.
 Old Uncle Nathan he let one roar,
 And he shook his fist at the cellar door;
 'Did ye break my jug?' she was yellin' still.
 'No, durn your pelt, but I swow I will.'
 And you'd thought that the house was a-going to fall
 When the old jug smashed on the cellar wall."

He was a Civil War Veteran, enlisting in the 184th N. Y. Regiment, admitted to the Soldiers' Home in Togus, Me., but d. at Fitchburg, Mass., and his remains were taken in charge and buried in the G. A. R. lot in Forest Hill Cemetery. He had a wife, Nellie, and a daughter, Edna Lillian, who d. in Fitchburg. The reason David Mossman changed his name is this: His mother dying soon after his birth, he was taken care of by his mother's people in Acton, his father doing nothing for his support. But when he was fourteen years old and upwards, and had worked for his uncle, John Chaffin, his father kidnapped him and carried him to Maine, evidently meaning to make him work and to take his wages. But the boy escaped from his father and returned to Acton, and moved about from place to place afterwards always in fear of his father. Then to facilitate his escape, and perhaps also because he hated to bear the name of so bad a father he changed his name from David Mossman to George W. Mason.

SAMUEL (David 8), b. in Acton, Mass., July 16, 1784; d. in Weston, Vt., Nov. 5, 1826. His father, David, was a soldier of the Revolution, serving about a year (see his record). Samuel's death was very sudden. He went to the pasture one Sunday morning to salt his cattle, and did not come back to breakfast. Becoming alarmed, a search was made and he was found dead in the pasture. His farm was about a mile from the village of Weston. He and his wife appear to have been devout Christians. In the old Congregational Church records, under date of Dec. 17, 1826, there is this entry: "Rev. Philetus Clark baptized Samuel Evans, Eliza Ann, Wilder Chamberlain and Christopher Page Farlee, children of Samuel and Elizabeth Chafin." The death of the father a little over a month before this probably had its influence in this dedication of the children to the service of God. For some reason Samuel considered that one of the f's in the name of Chaffin was superfluous, and he began, and continued, to write his name Chafin, as his children and grandchildren have done. On Feb. 20, 1810, he m. Elizabeth Farley, dau. of Stephen and Mary (Shattuck), b. Sept. 15, 1785, in Hollis, N. H.; d. May 15, 1859, at East Troy, Wis. Children, b. in Weston, Vt.:

ROBERT (Robert 10), b. in Acton, Mass., Feb. 21, 1797; d. Dec. 16, 1887. Before his death he gave to Miss Ada Davis, who gave them to the writer, many valuable Chaffin data which have been of great service in the compilation of this history. When he was a young man he learned the cabinet maker's trade, but he also carried on his farm as long as he was able. He lived during the last of his life in the middle of Acton. He held several town offices, and was an attendant at the Universalist Church and an earnest supporter of it. He m. Nov. 7, 1819, Susanna Conant of Acton, b. June 5, 1800; d. Nov. 26, 1871. Robert evidently approved of the marriage state, as he remained a widower only thirty-five days, when, on Dec. 31, 1871, he m. Mrs. Mary W. Handley, widow of Amos Handley, whom she m. Nov. 3, 1831. She was b. Feb. 18, 1807; dau. of Joel S. and Hannah (Brown) Wright, and d. Aug. 7, 1895. Robert had no children by either wife but Jan. 3, 1860, he adopted two children, Susanna and Robert Conant, niece and nephew of his first wife. They were twins and they took the names Susanna and Robert Chaffin, were b. June 26, 1845, children of Nahum and Eliza (Gilson). Nahum d. Apr. 23, 1854.

On Oct. 30, 1864, Susanna m. George F. Proctor of Littleton, who was b. Oct. 29, 1840, son of Joel and Elizabeth. Children: 1. Lizzie A., b. Nov. 22, 1865; m. Sept. 11, 1895, in Ayer, George F. Stone and had Arvia P., b. Sept. 27, 1896. 2. Herbert F., b. June 29, 1871; m. in Littleton, Nov. 13, 1897, Elizabeth L. Hume, and had Marjorie P., b. Mar. 31, 1900, and Katharine L., b. May 13, 1904.

The adopted son Robert enlisted for the Civil War before he was seventeen years old in the 32d Mass. Regiment, and served over three years. He is a carpenter, lived in Lakewood, N. J., and Whitinsville, Mass., and finally moved to Pasadena, Cal., where he now lives. He had his name changed back, after he was 21 years old, to what it was before his adoption, Robert Chaffin Conant. He m. June 27, 1869, Sarah M. Burbank, b. Mar. 30, 1848, and they had 1. Julian Edwin, b. June 10, 1870; m. Jan. 16, 1896, Josie King, and lives in Los Angeles, Cal.; a machinist; and 2. Eva Leone, b. Mar. 2, 1874; d. Feb. 10, 1901, in Newport, R. I., a graduate nurse of the Newport Hospital.

Robert Chaffin of Acton, commonly known as "Esquire Robert," was a man of decided character and some queer notions. The trouble between him and his adopted son, and what led the latter to resume the name of Conant, was said to be because Esq. Robert claimed the son's wages after he enlisted as a soldier because he was not then 21 years old. But he failed to get the son's army pay. He was a member of the Universalist Society, but was a free thinker and commonly known as an "Infidel." At his death he left his money to the "Paine Memorial" in Boston. The will was contested by young Robert and it is said the courts allowed him $15,000.00. Esq. Robert was a tee-totaller and was a little cranky as to the kind of liquid he absorbed. He drank neither tea nor coffee, his libations consisting of a decoction steeped from raspberry leaves, and this was done, unless common report belies him, largely for economical reasons. After his death his widow promised to turn over to a relative who visited her a barrel of dried raspberry leaves that he left behind him. But she either changed her mind or forgot this promise for it was not fulfilled; but the relative told the writer of this notice that he was able to survive the disappointment. Economy must have played a part in the management of Esq. Robert's household affairs, for a friend who used to visit his adopted daughter at his house declared that she always came home hungry.

He was a well educated, well read man and very interesting to meet and converse with, provided, however, that two subjects were always avoided, viz: doctors and religion. There was in his house a block of patchwork, pieced by his first wife, with a white center, and on that he had inscribed these lines:

"ON LABORER'S MONEY THE LAWYERS FEAST, ALSO THE DOCTOR AND THE PRIEST."
ACTON, APRIL 1ST, 1852. ROBERT CHAFFIN.

It was said of him, "He was a good neighbor, one we felt free to call upon in sickness or trouble and never called in vain, but he would get the best end of a bargain, if not in one way then in another."

GLADWIN (Simon 14), b. in Union, Me., Oct. 10, 1804; d. in Hutchinson, Kan., Mar. 13, 1890. Gladwin Chaffin, a sketch of whom is here presented, was one of the most original and interesting members of the Robert Chaffin race. At seven years of age he rode behind a four-horse team a journey of 1050 miles from Maine to Ohio, fifty-seven days on the way, which kept the growing boy's eyes open with wonder. After such schooling as he could get in the new country he had come to, he studied medicine in Dover, O., and practiced there and in East Union several years. After his marriage, which will presently be spoken of, he moved to the neighborhood of what is now Fostoria, going from there to Van Buren, where he lived several years, from thence settling in Decatur, Ill., and finally returned to Ohio, settling in Napoleon, where his wife died in 1875. After his wife's death, which deeply affected him, he went to Hutchinson, Kan., to find a happy home with his youngest daughter, Mrs. Irene C. Bigger, in whose home he died in 1890. He practiced medicine for fifty-five years with real success, was frequently consulted by other physicians, was equally attentive to poor and rich, and was most highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was never sick in bed during his life. Just before his death he had been eating and rose to walk towards the door when, beginning to fall, his daughter, Amanda, who was with him, caught him in her arms and he was laid upon a lounge, where he breathed his last immediately. In religious faith he was a Presbyterian.

A few interesting reminiscences are here presented. They were given to the writer of this Chaffin history by his granddaughter, his dear wife's namesake, Diadamia Bigger Lewis, in whose mother's home he passed his last years. "He was a physician of the old school, through and through. He compounded his own medicines, and my sister and I used to watch him weigh out his Dover's powders and quinine on his tiny brass scales. He was famous locally for two or three remedies of his own compounding. One was his green salve and another was his liniment. He had much mechanical skill and could turn his hand to any sort of work. He made a wonderfully substantial wooden trunk of huge size, a good-looking corner cupboard, and a really beautiful hat-box, all made in thoroughly workmanlike fashion, nicely joined and skilfully finished. Among his peculiarities was this, that he wore a shawl instead of an overcoat, wore a soft felt hat, wore a wig and always carried a cane. I would say he is the most thoroughly old-fashioned figure in my memory, and he was so regarded in our little western town. He had scores of friends, was extremely sociable and fond of making and receiving calls. His memory of his wife was sweet and precious to him. I have in my possession a little note book of his containing various memoranda, and among them a few lines here and there alluding to her, of which the following are samples: 'I would live for her alone, and exult in the possession of a treasure so rare in every excellence, so beautiful in mind and body. She is a very pearl among women.' This was written in his old age, and he adds, 'They talk of love in youth; but I believe less in its worth than in the love we give each other now.' Grandfather was extremely fond of poetry and copied in full his favorite poems. He was fond of reading the Psalms and had a beautiful copy in large type.

I remember hearing him tell the story of his seeing Diadamia Pancoast for the first time. She was driving a team of very spirited horses and managing them superbly. My grandfather gazed after her and vowed in his heart that that girl should be his wife—and she was.”

On May 27, 1830, Gladwin m. Diadamia Elgin Pancoast. She was b. Aug. 1, 1809, in Buffalo Valley, Pa., and d. Apr. 26, 1875, in Napoleon, O.; dau. of William and Vashti Pancoast. He studied law at Ann Arbor; graduated; appointed agent of the Bureau of Freedmen and abandoned lands in South Carolina, and served until 1871; came to Hutchinson, Kan., Oct. 1, 1872, and has lived there ever since. His business was lands, loans and municipal bonds, and he retired from business in 1903. He traveled abroad for about three years, going to Alaska, Europe, and around the world. After returning home he wrote a four volume book, "Around the World with a Business Man," compiled partly from letters written home, and published by the John C. Winston Co., of Philadelphia. The writer of this Chaffin history can testify that this "Around the World" is a very instructive and interesting book, its author being a keen observer, touching always on the salient features of what he saw, and enlivening his narrative with bright touches of humor. It is worthy to be in every public library. Mr. Bigger is a great lover of books, of travel and of Nature. He divides his time now almost equally between Hutchinson, Kan., and Cascade, Colo., where he has a mountain home called Burbrae, so named from the old Bigger homestead in Scotland. The altitude is 7500 feet and the summer climate is ideal.

Chaffin, now living (1912), says there was no Anna. The Anna Smith should have been Amos Smith, a son who was one of the legal heirs, and was not named in the settlement, proving that the Anna Smith is a mistake for Amos Smith.

They were considered about the handsomest couple that entered the church where they worshipped. Not long after his marriage he settled in Concord, N. H., where he engaged in the harness and trunk business. He was gentlemanly in his bearing, a great lover of music and an excellent singer. He was a

46

WILLIAM FARWELL (Gladwin 16), b. Jan. 14, 1804, in Harvard, Mass.; d. Apr. 30, 1838, in Oxford, Me. He was a cooper by trade, and he was for awhile a schoolmaster. While teaching in Pepperell, Mass., a bit of romance was connected with him that is worth telling. He lived with an uncle who was childless and who proposed to make William his heir. Adjoining his farm was another whose owner had a daughter who was an only child, and was about William's age. The uncle thought it would be a fine scheme for William to marry this daughter that so, eventually, the two farms might be united in a single ownership. Whether or not the daughter was consulted as to this arrangement does not appear. But William, meanwhile, had fallen in love with a handsome pupil in his school, and he would not give her up for the sake of gaining his uncle's farm, and he was consequently disinherited. For his loyalty to this girl, Louisa Shattuck, his son, the writer of this notice, blesses and honors his memory. He followed her to Concord, N. H., where both of them had relatives, and there married her. Not long after his marriage he moved "down east" to Oxford, Me., where he engaged in his cooper business.

When he went there the moral condition of the community was rather low. There was a meeting house but not enough religious interest to support preaching. Liquor was freely sold in two stores and the sale was well patronized, and the people gathered in the bar-rooms even on Sunday. Mr. Chaffin and a friend of his who boarded with him, named Pingree, made up their minds that it was the need of social intercourse rather than the love of drink that thus gathered the people together, and to supply this need in a more rational way, they, both being singers, organized a singing school, which became a great success. They organized a choir, and then to take the people out of the drinking places on Sunday they met in the church on that day. This led to their having a minister come to speak to them, and soon regular Sunday services were resumed, a minister engaged, a real religious interest awakened, and a better moral condition in the town resulted—the credit of which was due to the singing school organized by Mr. Chaffin and Mr. Pingree, and conducted by the former. The Chaffins of that time in that branch of it were very musical

In 1890, Mr. Pingree was living in Portland, Me., and he wrote to Mr. Chaffin's son, then a minister in North Easton, Mass., as follows: "Your father was a fine looking man, of quiet but social bearing and unblemished character, and I loved him as my most genial associate. The death of your father was a very solemn event in the place. He was buried from the church, and the choir in tears sang in the service. I was one of the bearers." Hon. John J. Perry, in 1892, wrote to Mr. Chaffin's son as follows: "Your father was one of the most genial, pleasant, even tempered men I ever knew. None of the common perplexities of life ever seemed to move him. His 'way' was one of 'even tenor,' and he had the confidence and respect of every one with whom he associated."

The cause of his death was so exceptional as to be regarded as phenomenal, and it is a matter of scientific interest to state it here. He died because of the enlargement of the thymus gland, which at last caused suffocation. The thymus gland is a small gland in the thorax behind the breast bone and near the neck, but having no known function. It is usually normally absorbed in infancy or in very early years. But "Pepper's Practice" states that two or three instances have been known where the gland, instead of being absorbed, enlarged and caused death. Mr. Chaffin's case was one of these, and after a post mortem examination it was fully reported in a medical and surgical journal by Dr. Jacob M. Tewksbury, who had charge of the case.

William Farwell Chaffin m. in Concord, N. H., Mar. 5, 1829, Louisa Shattuck, dau. of Ebenezer Lakin and Hannah (Tarbell). She was b. in Pepperell, Mass., Oct. 31, 1803, and d. in Concord, N. H., at her sister's, Mrs. Gleason, May 20, 1851. Her father was a Revolutionary soldier, and was in the battles of Lexington and Bunker Hill. He enlisted in the Continental Army for three years, serving most of the time in Col. Michael Jackson's regiment. He was one of Gen. Washington's army during the dreadful winter at Valley Forge. One of the stories he used to tell his children deserves to go on record here. Many of the soldiers at Valley Forge were sick. There was a doctor who had charge of them of whose loyalty they became suspicious. Ebenezer noticed that the men for whom he prescribed all died. So when the doctor gave him pills to take, he merely pretended to swallow them, and instead dropped them down behind his back among the hemlock branches that formed his bed, "And I got well," he said, "while the other men who took the pills of this Tory doctor died." The truth of this story may be doubtful, but it records the impressions of the soldiers of Valley Forge. William F. and Louisa had:

H., supporting herself by doing housework. But when her uncle, Mr. Henry Lawrence moved to Barrington, Ill., she accompanied the family and lived with them. She was expecting to marry a young man named Holmes, whom she knew in Vermont and who had gone to California. But he died, and she afterward went to California and, on Oct. 21, 1861, she m. her be-

JOSEPH (Gladwin 16), b. in Harvard, Mass., Mar. 13, 1807; d. in Harvard, Jan. 14, 1898; m. Sept. 24, 1834, Julia Farnsworth, dau. of William and Betsey (Curtis), b. in Groton, Mass., July 3, 1811; d. Dec. 12, 1854, in Northboro, Mass.; a woman who was gifted intellectually and a very positive character. One who knew her well when living in Oxford, Me., in a letter to the writer of this notice, said: "She was a Unitarian, but was an interested reader of the writings of Emanuel Swedenborg, and introduced them to me; and the result was that I was converted from a Methodist class leader to a Swedenborgian New Churchman."

Mr. Chaffin at the age of 17 went to Concord, N. H., where he learned the harness business in the shop of his brother, John. Not long after his marriage he moved to Oxford, Me., where his brother William and sister Sally lived. He remained there about twelve years and served some time as selectman and overseer of the poor, and was assistant postmaster for three years. From Oxford he went to Northboro, Mass., where he carried on the harness business for six years. There his wife died. Children, by Julia Farnsworth, his first wife:

Wilder, and they had a daughter, Nancy E. (Mrs. Hardy). In 1859, Mr. Chaffin came back to his native Harvard, where for twenty-five years he was employed as station agent of the Worcester and Nashua railroad. He has the remarkable record of surviving four severe attacks of pneumonia, all of which occurred after the age of 72. He lived to be nearly 91 years old. His memory was excellent and at 90 years he could read his daily newspaper without spectacles. He was much interested in politics, was a staunch Republican, and in religion was a Unitarian. He was a man of fine character, friendly and sociable and thoroughly respected by all who knew him. Children, by his second marriage:

SHADRACH CHAFFIN

Shadrach had a tough time of it when a boy. He is said to have been "barefoot at the age of nine years, and dressed in a linen blouse and trousers in winter, and ate off wooden dishes." He ran away from his step-mother and took refuge with his older brother Reuben. He soon shifted for himself, got employment wherever he could, earning for his first wages seven dollars per month. He next obtained employment on a keel boat on the Ohio river at a dollar a day, and followed this occupation for two or three summers, working also with farmers as opportunity occurred. About the year 1819 he obtained possession of 160 acres of heavily timbered, untilled land, "entered from Congress at $2.50 per acre, and on the 9th of January, 1820, he, with his newly wedded wife, moved into a hewn log house which he had built." There he took up the laborious task of clearing ground that was "without a lick ever having been done on it," cutting off the timber and converting it into a farm. By hard work and strict economy he accumulated sufficient means to give each of his thirteen children some assistance financially in their start out in life. His entire life from Jan. 9, 1820, was spent at his farm home in Vernon township, Scioto Co., Ohio, where he d. June 13, 1884, at the age of 87 years, 3 months and 5 days.

Shadrach Chaffin was noted in Southern Ohio as a man of high honor, probity, and unusual common sense; a man of reverent and clean speech; frequently called upon to settle disputes among neighbors; a deeply religious man; by profession a Baptist, but said to be opposed to "close communion" and some of the extreme calvinistic dogmas. He was, in fact, liberal and rational in religion, as in everything else. A granddaughter writes that "He was a regular sage; he just knew everything." Let the reader look upon his noble, handsome face, and he will readily believe that "his life and character were an inspiration to all who knew him."

His father met reverses when his forge was superseded by the invention of rolling iron, but his boys earned the money to redeem the farm. After marriage he spent four years in Tennessee directing slave labor, but did not like the society and returned to Ohio improving a farm there for a few years, and then, in 1856, moved to Iowa, where he engaged in farming, owning at his death 450 acres of good land.

He trained his children to work, took a lively interest in public schools but taught his children at home also in the long winter evenings; was very systematic in his work, began early but did not work or allow his children or hired help to work after dark, closing work on Saturday evening at four o'clock, and allowed no Sunday work except in an emergency. Clifford has had to bear the great misfortune of being infirm from birth, so infirm as to be unable to walk even with crutches without difficulty, but he has been most tenderly cared for by his devoted mother and affectionate brother, his father having died when the boys were twelve years old. Clyde is a leading grocery man in Bloomfield, young as he is, his store being given the name of "The Clean Store." He is unm., a member of the City Council, and with his devout mother, an active worker in the Christian Church. The father was in the grocery and milling business, but long sickness consumed most of his property. He left, however, a good home and insurance to help maintain his widow and children. He was a good man with many friends, and Martha, his wife, was a noble woman and devoted to her family.

8. Mary Vesta, b. May 30, 1857; m. Feb. 13, 1879, William Monroe Brunk, b. Mar. 23, 1857, son of Amon and Maria J. (Lundsford). Mr. and Mrs. Brunk are members of the Christian Church and generous givers. He is a salesman of high rank and great enthusiasm. He won the premium prize in 1911 by leading the sales force of 200 men on the road for shoe manufacturers of Chicago. He also owns and directs a farm of 260 acres. He and Mrs. Brunk are cheerful hosts, and the cousins like to head towards "Uncle Billy's and Aunt Mary's."

They have (a) Guy B., b. Oct. 28, 1879, at Pulaski, Ia.; m. June 27, 1904, Delia Still, dau. of S. S. and Ella D. (Daugherty). He graduated in the Des Moines School of Osteopathy, but became a traveling salesman earning $2,500 per year; then entered the Des Moines Trust Co. and became manager of the real estate department, then secretary of the company, and he has just opened a new addition in Des Moines, selling over 300 lots the first week. His wife is a graduate of the liberal arts department of Drake University of 1903, of fine talents. They have William Summerfield, b. Apr. 9, 1907, and Guy George, b. Dec. 2, 1910. (b) Maude Calfurna, b. July 22, 1881; m. Sept. 27, 1909, William E. Robinson of Waterloo, Ia., b. Sept. 14, 1883, son of Chas. W. and Rosella (Stickles). They have one son, William Charles, b. Mrs. Robinson is a graduate of the Des Moines Musical College, chairman of the music committee of the Christian Church of which he is a deacon and in which they are active workers. (c) Charles Gregory, b. Jan. 27, 1894, soon to graduate from the high school, a fine student. There were two other children who died at birth.

9. James Henry, b. Apr. 17, 1860. He inherited a splendid physique from his parents, both of whom were vigorous types from strong ancestors. He is six feet in height, stands erect, weighs 225 pounds and rejoices that he was brought up on the farm. He attended the country school, took pride in good farming, allowing no one to make straighter corn rows than he. Because he thought the home place none too large for his younger brothers was the reason he left it.

In the fall of 1880 he engaged in general merchandising with his brother-in-law, W. M. Brunk, at Pulaski, Ia. To attract customers and meet competition they also engaged in the seed business, and Mr. Stockham made an arrangement with Albert Dickenson, the "Seed King," in Chicago, and by his skill in advertising he became a salesman of unusual ability and the firm prospered. The business continued for four years, but Mr. Stockham longed to go to college, and this soon became his dominant idea.

However, there were other problems. Three years before he had married "his Fortune"—Miss Dora Fortune, Apr. 23, 1882, b. July 24, 1861, dau. of John and Sarah (Baker) of near Bloomfield, Ia. The young wife and mother encouraged her husband's desires for an education. Their home life had been blessed with two sweet children, yet she did not hesitate to go. The would-be student received every encouragement from Mr. Brunk and special help from other friends.

Late in December the annual invoice showed some profit, probably enough to keep him in school for two years. Thus he rushed to the train, not having time to tie his shoes or put on a collar as the train was due, but once aboard, shoes and collar were soon adjusted: he rode all night, reached Des Moines, rented a cottage, returned home the next night, packed the household goods, shipped them to Des Moines, and then with the family made a visit to the old homes and explained the move to the astonished and anxious parents for the first time. He would have told them before but was afraid they would try to discourage the move.

Jan. 5, 1886, at the age of 26, Mr. Stockham, with his wife and two children to support, entered Drake University, where he continued a student for seven years, lacking one term. He never failed in an examination and graduated from the Ministerial Department with class honors in June, 1891, and from the College of Liberal Arts, June, 1892. Besides carrying a full course of studies he preached almost every Sunday for about four years, leading the churches at Maxwell and Colfax, Ia., in building two of the best church buildings in their respective towns.

During two summer vacations he engaged in building and selling houses to supplement his earnings. By careful management and the splendid help of Mrs. Stockham the college courses were completed without going into debt and without impairing the small capital with which they entered. Mr. Stockham also designed the churches and residences which he built while a student.

When he graduated, he had calls to accept the pastorate of the Christian Churches at St. Paul, Minn., Columbus, Ind., and West Riverside, Cal., each one an attractive position. He was also solicited by F. M. Rains, Secretary of the Foreign Missionary Society to locate at Constantinople and take charge of the Christian Missions in the Ottoman Empire. But conditions at Drake University were such that he was prevailed upon to remain in Des Moines and devote his time and talents to financing Drake University. Chancellor Geo. T. Carpenter's health was broken under the strain; the school was burdened with debt and he urged Mr. Stockham to join him in saving the school, at the time saying to him, "By this change you may not get to preach much but you can thus become the means of educating many others who will preach." Pres. B. O. Aylesworth urged him to accept. The Board of Trustees had extended a unanimous call, but he hesitated to assume the responsibility. Finally he offered to make a trial trip and returned at the end of the fourth day with property valued at $19,000. Encouraged by this response to his appeals he raised the cry for "$100,000 in thirteen days," the time yet remaining till Commencement Day. The cry was caught up like fire driven by a wind; students, faculty, ministers and friends of the school joined heartily and Commencement Day recorded the victory.

In 1896, Gen. F. M. Drake was nominated for governor of Iowa, and Mr. Stockham by hard work in securing delegates to the nominating convention favorable to Gen. Drake helped to turn threatened defeat into victory, former students of the university joining heartily in this service.

Mr. Stockham resigned the financial secretaryship of the university in 1897, after five years of important service, carrying it over the great financial depression of 1893-'97. But the Board of management never quite released him, and he has been one of the trustees for over twenty years. He has been honored as chairman of the Board, and as comptroller, in which office he led the great campaign that saved the Medical Department, when $158,000 was raised in six weeks in the spring of 1910, some of the largest gifts being made in response to his solicitation.

The great stadium, the pride of the central states, was a victory and triumph of Mr. Stockham's idea, even after the ground had been condemned and abandoned by the athletic board and pronounced impractical by many of the university trustees. Mr. Stockham believes in physical, intellectual and moral development along scientific lines. But his interest in humanity has not been confined to college work. He mortgaged his home for $2,000 to help put on its feet the Personal Help Publishing Co. to sell Dr. Stahl's Purity Books, the "Self and Sex Series." He has raised more money for medical education in Iowa than any one else and takes great pleasure in the success of the Free Clinic at the Drake Medical Department, where already 15,000 treatments are given annually.

He has helped to work out details for some large advertising propositions. One of the largest shoe manufacturers in the country kept him for two and a half years developing advertising centers and training their 170 salesmen to improve their team work. He disliked to be away from his family so much and quit the road a year ago and has since been engaged in designing and building high class residences. He designs the buildings, buys the materials, engages the mechanics and supervises the construction. His talent in this field is recognized by competent critics and his large business experience qualifies him for fine results.

Whatever success he has attained he credits largely to his patient, generous-hearted wife, a good home keeper and true mother of his children, hospitable, earnest in church activities, a deaconess in the University Church. Mr. Stockham has not devoted his efforts exclusively to money-getting, and has declined many flattering offers of good positions with corporations. He is a member of the Christian Church and an elder in the University Church, where there are 2,700 members, and has been an elder for twenty years. Politically he calls himself a "Progressive." What most impresses the author of this history, and what makes Mr. Stockham's career a splendid example for young men, is the energy and devotion he showed in gaining a first rate education—going through a thorough college course after being married and having children. He probably reflects as much credit upon our Chaffin race as any member thereof.

As already mentioned, Mr. Stockham on July 24, 1882, m. Dora Fortune. Their children were 1. In 1853 he and a brother rigged up a team and started from Scioto Co., O., and after six weeks on the road arrived at the little village of Vinton, Ia., where they bought land at $1.25 per acre, and then returned to Ohio. In September, 1853, quite an emigrant train of them started for Iowa, arriving in October. He and his brother and Peter Kuhn and their families, twenty-two persons in all, got the use of a log house of two rooms, remaining there for two months, until they had erected log cabins of their own. Five years later Mr. Boggs built a brick house, one of the first in the county, hauling his finishing lumber from Muscatine, Ia., with hand shaved shingles, and boiled the raw linseed oil out of doors to do his painting with. He had one of the first covered carriages in the county and loaned it for funerals for 100 miles about. The first school house was of logs with slab benches; teacher's pay about $20 per month, added to by private subscription. Wheat was 50 cents a bushel, corn, oats and potatoes as low as 10 cents; eggs 5 cents a dozen, butter 6 to 10 cents, dressed pork $1.25 per hundred. But the Civil War raised prices, harvest hands getting $5 per day, and stock and all farm products rapidly advanced in price. Modern machinery has made the farmers rich, so that now they have good roads, telephones, auto travel, etc.—and farms are selling from $60 to $250 per acre. Besides farming, in 1868 Mr. Boggs was in the grocery business with David S. Chaffin. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Boggs are 1. Alvin Chaffin, b. Oct. 18, 1848, in Scioto Co., O. Associated in the grocery business with his brother, Wm. C. Boggs, at Vinton, Ia. Later he manufactured paint at Fort Dodge, Ia. His body was found there the next morning in seven or eight feet of water. The men could (or would) give no account of the matter when investigation was made. RODNEY (John 27), b. in Buckfield, Me., Dec. 12, 1808; d. in Portland, May 11, 1886. When he was 17 years old he went to Boston and learned the carpenter's trade, remaining there about five years, when he returned to his native place and began business as a contractor and master builder, doing a large and successful business. Many of the public and private buildings in that village and in the county were built by him. He was largely interested in the Buckfield Branch railroad at the time it was built, having the contract to build the station houses and furnish sleepers. He lost heavily by this operation, but, instead of evading his responsibilities, he paid every obligation in full, and with the earnings of years reduced to a few thousand dollars, moved to Portland in 1854, and established himself in business. Many of the buildings now standing in this city were built by him. He was a good mechanic, knew what it was worth to do a good job, and having given a party his price for a piece of work was never known to change it, therefore people with whom he dealt had confidence in him. He was his own architect. He was neither a smoker nor a drinker. He was a member of the I. O. O. F. He met his last sickness with quiet resignation and Christian hope. His wife was a woman of sterling Christian character, a teacher before her marriage and a writer of real ability, one of the leading Methodist women of her time. On Oct. 16, 1831, he m. Mary G. They had no children but they reared, although they did not legally adopt, a son of Mr. Chaffin's brother, Sumner, the boy being named Abel Wheeler after his uncle. Mr. Chaffin changed his name so as to spell it Chabin. The explanation of this freak is well told by his widow, as follows: "My husband, while he was in Bangor, Me., was a member of a Boys Military Club, whose captain was Hannibal Hamlin (afterwards Governor of Maine and also Vice-President). The boys of the Club wanted to do something unusual and when the state legislature convened, asked to have a change made in their names, and that is how it happened that we spell our name with a b," Chabin instead of Chaffin.

Abel learned the mercantile business in Bangor, Me., and afterwards engaged in business for himself in Newport, Me., and was very successful. But because of ill health he moved to Milwaukee, Wis., where his sister, Mrs. Kirby, lived, but the climate not proving beneficial he returned to Newport and lived there three years. He was twice elected to the legislature of Maine; afterwards at Shelbyville he was mayor for two terms. LOUIS RICE (Leonard 31), was b. in Princeton, Mass., Dec. 3, 1806; d. Mar. 5, 1891, in Cedar City, Utah. He settled early in La Harpe, Ill. The town when he went there was named Franklin, but as another town in the state claimed priority to the name, it was necessary to change it, and the new name of La Harpe was suggested by Mr. Chaffin and adopted by the town. He was one of the first merchants there, the first postmaster and the first justice of the peace, and showed a great deal of push and energy while there. In 1852 he went to Utah with his wife and seven children and settled in Salt Lake City. He adopted the religion of the Mormons, enduring many of the hardships of pioneer life, and remained up to his death an earnest worker in the religion he had espoused, making many sacrifices for it, but he never became a polygamist. A brother of his in Massachusetts offered him every financial inducement if he would forsake his religion, but he was proof against such a bribe. In 1856 he fulfilled a mission to Australia, being absent for four years. He was a pioneer to St. George, Utah, in 1861, and an alderman there. He was a heavy loser at The Muddy, the town being entirely destroyed by fire in 1865 or 1866. He located at Cedar City, was notary public and justice of the peace for ten years and held many other offices of trust.

In 1837 he entered the employ of his brother, Darwin Chaffin, who was the first man in Boston to open a men's furnishing store, his place of business being at 80 Washington street. Upon the death of his brother, John C. Chaffin started in business for himself in 1846, at the northeast corner of State and Washington streets. Later he purchased the building at the corner of Washington and Franklin streets. At the time of the great Boston conflagration his building was destroyed with the entire stock. His new building was the first one to rise from the ashes. He retired from active business in 1896.

SAMUEL EVANS (Samuel 32), b. Feb. 27, 1811, in Weston, Vt.; d. Oct. 14, 1865, at East Troy, Wis. In 1837 he went to Wisconsin and took up a land claim which he afterwards purchased from the government. He went back to Vermont in the autumn, and in the spring of 1838 he returned to Wisconsin with his wife and baby, his mother and his wife's brother, Stillman Pollard, settling on the farm he had selected the year before, where he spent the remainder of his life. At the time of his death his farm was one of the finest in the township and it was upon this farm that twelve of his children were born, and some of them have lived there continuously to the present time (1912). He and his wife were members of the Congregational Church of East Troy. In politics he was a Republican but never an office seeker, his chief interest in life being that of caring for his family. If any proof were needed to show that he and his wife were persons of exceptionally high character and ability, it is to be found in the unusual worth and capacity of their children, of whom these parents had good reason to be proud. Samuel Evans Chafin m. Mar. 5, 1835, Betsey Almyra Pollard, b. at Surrey, N. H., May 3, 1817; d. at East Troy, Mar. 18, 1882; dau. of James and Martha (Martin). - viii. FANNY OELLA, b. Dec. 17, 1850; d. Mar. 1, 1911, on the farm where she was b. For the material for this sketch the writer is indebted to a paper read at the funeral service by Mrs. Alura Collins Hollister of Dodgers Corners, Wis., a lifelong friend of Miss Chafin. An earnest and sincere student in her school days, she graduated from the Whitewater State Normal School in 1879. She taught school for three years, but afterwards prepared herself for a business career by learning typewriting and stenography. Her special ability in this line was signally proved by her being chosen for a position as the result of a competitive examination in which there were fifty applicants examined. Some years ago she was engaged as secretary by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association. This transferred her work to New York City, where she made many friends, and found congenial companionship with some of the brightest women workers and thinkers engaged in the reform movements of the day. Wherever she was, on the old farm where she was born, in school either as pupil or teacher, or in office work, she was always faithful, earnest, conscientious, quiet, unpretentious. No one can look at her picture, which is given here, without being impressed, not merely by her personal beauty, but also by her evident sweetness and force of character, and her intellectual superiority. It must have been a comfort to her, if she was to die, to pass away at the dear home she had always loved. There a beautiful and appreciative funeral service was held on Dec. 6. Many affectionate and appreciative testimonials were sent to various members of the family, revealing a high estimate of her character and personal qualities. A beautiful booklet with her picture, with these testimonials, and with the funeral service, was published not long after her death.

Aaron Chaffin was pastor in Danversport, Mass., where he was ordained, and remained there twelve years. He then removed to Manchester, N. ORIN (Asaph 36), b. in Boxboro, Mass., abt. 1806; d. Apr. 8, 1853; was a stone cutter and contractor; went to Maine in 1830 to contract on building a canal from Sebago Lake to Portland; in blasting a ledge years afterward to improve the canal he was severely injured; recovered and employed by Portland to do some blasting; was cautioned by city officers not to use the heavy blasts he employed because he did great damage to adjacent buildings, but being a self-willed man, he paid no attention to their demands and used even heavier charges which wrecked several houses near by. He was afterwards engaged in widening the canal at Gambo; blasted a ledge which merely split it, and then applying a seam charge it exploded immediately, filled his eyes and face with powder and otherwise seriously injured him, so that he was disabled henceforth for any laborious work. He then bought land near Naples, Me., and carried on a farm until three years before his death; then lived at Standish for about a year and then he moved to North Windham, where he remained until his death. He was six feet tall and very powerful and clever at any work he undertook. On a fifty-dollar bet he once chopped six cords and three feet of wood in nine hours and forty minutes, an astonishing feat!

About 1832 he m. Dorothy Green of Standish, Me., b. in Naples, Me., in 1813, and d. 1894; dau. of Wyer and Amy (Morton). Having been thrown from a carriage she was a cripple with a broken hip for over thirty years. Before his marriage her son Orin looked after and helped her, but her chief support came from her son Gerrit Smith, who lived with her until he was fourteen years old and gave all his wages to her until he was twenty years old, and in 1893 he and his brother, John P., built her an eight-room house. In her last illness Smith Chaffin cared for her night and day, never leaving her, and held her hand at last when she passed peacefully away. Children:

seventeen years and managed their business in Boston, sending his mother at this time twenty dollars a and a real gentleman, and was his mother's sole support in her declining years. He is now rather broken down from a long strain of overwork, but has been at the City Hospital, Boston, for treatment, and is assured by his surgeon that there is no reason in his condition why he may not live many years yet.

Later, however, he was appointed Lieut.-Col. of the First Regt., O. M. in Hancock Co., by Gov. David Todd, for a term of five years, but his poor health prevented his accepting the position. On Nov. 29, 1875, he went to Hutchinson, Kansas, where he has owned four farms and is doing well financially. He is a member of the Joe Hooker, G. A. R., Post No. 17.

NORMAN (Simon 40), b. Mar. 5, 1839. At the age of 17 he went to work for William Spear, Wooster, O., where during 1856-57 he learned cabinet making. This work not proving very remunerative he returned to the farm. On Sept. 14, 1861, he enlisted at Wooster in Company C, 41st Ohio Infantry. This regiment went to Gallipolis and Louisville, and arrived at Pittsburg Landing on Apr. 6, 1862. On the morning of the 7th they engaged in battle, the last eight miles of the march having been covered in two and one-half hours. John R. Weaver, a chum of Norman's, fell soon after the fighting began, and Joseph Carlin was wounded. The 41st Ohio and 9th Indiana regiments by some error were ordered to charge a rebel battery. They captured it, but, being unable to hold it and having nothing with which to spike the guns, they rammed them full of mud, and then fell back, but only a small part of the regiment again reached the Union lines. All the officers being wounded the orderly sergeant brought the regiment out of the engagement. Norman was wounded three times but not disabled.

After about one month's delay they moved forward to Murfreesboro and then engaged in the battle of Stone River. The regiment then marched forward to the last line of works in front of Atlanta. Norman was near Gen. McPherson of Clyde, O., when he was killed, July 23, 1864. He was himself wounded by a shell from Atlanta on July 25, 1864, and so disabled that he had to go to the hos-

HIRAM W. (Simon 40), b. Apr. 15, 1843, at East Union Township, Wayne Co., O.; from earliest years strong and athletic, a champion wrestler in his time whom few wished to tackle, and with a record for long jumping. His school education was limited to what he received in the little district school-house, which still stands, but it made him an accurate speller, a good mathematician and penman. In common with his brothers he inherited a rare mechanical talent which has served him well all through a busy life, and enabled him to make several inventions which he never patented but which are now in general use. He started out early for himself, earning but fifty cents a day harvesting, splitting rails, or assisting in framing the heavy frame barns of those days. But before 22 years of age he had learned the cabinet maker's trade from the smoothing plane to the finest hand made dovetailing and veneering.

Before this, however, on July 29, 1863, he enlisted as a private in Capt. Hugh's Company D, 52d Regt. of Ohio National Guards. It was the home militia organized to train and equip men for the U. S. service. On May 2, 1864, under the call for one hundred thousand men for one hundred day's service, he was mustered in and sent to Washington, D. C., where in Co. C, 169th Regt. of Ohio National Guard Infantry, he did guard duty at Fort Ethan Allen on the banks of the Potomac; and was honorably discharged at the expiration of service, on Sept. 4, 1864, and draws a pension.

Returning home he entered into partnership with his brother Norman in cabinet making in Orrville, O., and installed the first improved steam engine in that place, which, by the way, is the sole source of power for the pipe organ factory in that little city today. Soon they added the undertaking business. But while, about 1871, a new three-story brick building was being erected, a fire destroyed nearly their whole stock, which had been moved to rented rooms. But nothing daunted a new partnership was formed, Norman preferring to move to the farm, Simon Brennerman being the new partner, an excellent business man, and soon afterwards A. J. Shontz joined the firm and they organized a new organ company, manufacturing the Ohio Beauty parlor and church organs. Mr. Shontz soon retiring from the company, H. W. Chaffin with three others continued the business until the great organ corporations of Chicago and New Jersey got well under way, filling the country with cheap organs, when he gradually closed out the business with profit. He had worked in the shop himself, continually improving the mechanism and action of the organs, and now his invention of the lever movement for raising the mute valves is in general use.

In 1879, having sold the furniture and undertaking business, he moved his family to a farm near Virden, Ill. This new venture proved a success to which the two older boys and his daughter contributed. But in 1890, these three having gone out into the world for themselves, the old farm homestead was rented, and with Leander Ames, a nephew of his wife, Mr. Chaffin engaged in milling and grain business in Caldwell, Kan., whither the remainder of the family removed later in the year. In partnership with Mr. Ames, and known as The Caldwell Milling Co., they are operating one of the most successful mills in southern Kansas. Mr. Chaffin helped plan and build from the foundation this, the first flouring mill in that part of the country. He also assisted with much hard labor and financial aid in the building of the new Presbyterian church in his home town.

He was m. Sept. 28, 1865, to Lear Weaver, dau. of Joseph and Magdalene (Webber) of Switzerland, b. Jan. 20, 1847, and grew to girlhood near East Union Township, Wayne Co., O. She proved a most congenial wife and devoted mother, laboring constantly body and soul for the success and honor of her family and home. Of this union five children were b., four at Orrville, O., and one (Viola) in Macoupin Co., Ill.:

Mrs. Hiram Chaffin, the mother, d. Jan. 22, 1883, and was buried at Girard, Ill. Through her married life she had been a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Nearly two years after his first wife's death, Mr. Chaffin m., Nov. 5, 1884, Mrs. Belle Buckwalter of Orrville, b. Mar. 5, 1856, in Elkhart, Ind.; dau. of John and Sarah (Walters), Rodebaugh. Of this union one child was b., viz.

WILLIAM H. CHAFFIN

Those who have known Hiram W. Chaffin say he has been the hardest working man they ever knew, and it is to this that his great ambition largely owes its successful reward. It has been said that he could make anything that could be made from wood or iron. Although nearly 70 years old, he remains hale and hearty; the scars of an active life are not wholly wanting, but he still conducts his successful business himself.

He then in 1892 returned to Wayne Co., O., having lived about ten years on a farm half a mile south of Raymore.

Early in 1893 he m. again and went west, taking a farm about five miles west of Humansville, Mo.; but in four years he returned to Ohio, purchasing the old home farm near what was formerly known as "Cross-Keys," but now East Union. This farm he sold later and purchased others near Orrville. In 1910 he sold his farm and bought property in Orrville in order to retire because of failing health. But he had worked too long and too hard and on Oct. 14, 1910, he died. His remains lie at rest in the Crown Hill cemetery at Orrville, while those of his wife and daughter Lula Belle are in the cemetery at Raymore, Mo. UNITY CHURCH, NORTH EASTON, MASS.

name was not, however, changed. In 1857 he entered the Unitarian Theo. School, at Meadville, Pa., graduating in 1861. In Sept., 1862, he settled as minister of the Second Unitarian Society of Philadelphia, Pa. In July, 1863, while visiting at his wife's former home at Meadville, he enlisted as private in the 58th Regt., Pa. Vols., serving for six weeks in the campaign that ended in the capture of John Morgan in his daring cavalry raid in Ohio. He left Philadelphia in the fall of 1865 and received a call to settle at Fitchburg, Mass. His settlement there was prevented by a severe heart strain caused by heavy lifting, which disabled him for two years. On the first Sunday of 1868, he became the minister of the Unitarian Church of North Easton, Mass., and is still there, now the senior pastor, the junior pastor being Rev. Abram Wyman. Mr. Chaffin is the longest settled Unitarian minister in America, still in active service over the same church, this year (1912) being the forty-fifth of his settlement there. He was a member of the school committee of Easton for twenty-eight years, secretary of the trustees of the Ames Free Library, a member for many years of the board of trustees of the Meadville Theo. School, and of the Fellowship Committee of the Unitarian denomination, chaplain and past commander of the A. B. Randall Post 52, G. A. R. of Easton. In 1886 he published an elaborate "History of the Town of Easton, Mass.," 838 pages, on which he had worked hard for years, and in 1909 he published the "History of Robert Randall and his Descendants," and has lately worked on this Chaffin history, sparing neither expense nor labor in the endeavor to compile as accurate and thorough a family history as his large experience in such work makes possible. He is an expert chess-player and in his younger days could play four blind-fold games simultaneously.

The beautiful stone church whose picture is herewith presented and in which he has preached for many years was a gift to the society by the Hon. Oliver Ames, who died in 1877. It contains, besides an elaborately carved pulpit and screen, a memorial to Hon. Frederick L. Ames, and two of the finest memorial windows in the country, the work of the distinguished artist, the late John La Farge.

On Aug. 12, 1862, at Meadville, Pa., he m. Rebecca Huidekoper Bagley, dau. of Michael Hodge and Margaret Lydia (Hazlett) b. at Meadville, Jan. 5, 1840, the service being conducted by Rev. Prof. Frederic Huidekoper, a relative of the bride. On Aug. 12 of this year (1912) Mr. and Mrs. Chaffin celebrated their golden wedding and were given a cordial reception by members of his parish and other friends. They have one child, by adoption, ANNIE R., b. July 15, 1863; m. June 26, 1894, Bertram D. Corliss, b. June 6, 1869; son of Daniel and Lydia M. (Whittier). They have one child, Elsie Chaffin, b. June 25, 1897.

A choice bit of humor regarding Mr. Chaffin deserves telling. He once fell into the thirty-foot wide and deep well from which water is pumped into the stand pipe that supplies the village of North Easton. When a witty Irish friend of his heard about it he exclaimed, "Well, begorra! we won't have to send to the Pope of Rome any more for holy wather, for now we have it on tap!" This, from a good Catholic to a Protestant minister, Mr. Chaffin regards as the best compliment he ever received.

JOSEPH FARNSWORTH (Joseph 47), b. Mar. 27, 1839, in Oxford, Me.; d. Mar. 27, 1911, in Fitchburg, Mass., on the 72d anniversary of his birth. About 1848 his father moved to Northboro, Mass. At the age of 17 years he went to Concord, N. H., where he was for a time a clerk in a drug store, and later he held a similar position in Hartford, Conn. In 1859, he was employed in the Arlington piano shops in Leominster, Mass., and after obtaining a practical knowledge of the business he went upon the road as a piano tuner and salesman. Except the time spent in service in the Civil War, his whole life has been devoted to music. He had a fine tenor voice, sang in church and concert, taught singing schools, conducted choruses, cantatas and oratorios. In 1877 he opened a music and piano store in Fitchburg, Mass., and did a successful business until his death.

"At the beginning of the Civil War he enlisted in the band of the 23d Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteers, which was recruited from among the musicians of this locality, and was under the leadership of H. C. Brown. A year later, in accordance with orders passed by the war department, his band, with many others in the service, was abolished, and he was attached to the quartermaster's department of the 3d army corps, in which he held various positions. Among these was that of forage master for several months at the headquarters of General Sickles.

"In November, 1863, he reenlisted under the famous bandmaster, Patrick S. Gilmore, in the band attached to the Department of the Gulf, in which he served to the close of the war, completing a period of nearly four years of active service.

"Mr. Chaffin was a member of E. V. Sumner Post 19, G. A. R., and was prominent in the ranks of Odd Fellowship, being a member of Apollo lodge, No. 205, of Canton Hebron, No. 11, of King David Encampment, No. 42, and of E. Victoria Morse lodge, Daughters of Rebekah. He was also a member of the Fitchburg Board of Trade and Merchants' Association, and was invariably interested in all movements and questions involving the civic advancement and welfare of Fitchburg and its people."

He was an attendant at the Universalist Church in which he was much interested and of which he was a generous supporter and to which by his will he left a bequest.

WILLIAM HENRY (John 65), b. in Claremont, N. H., 1839; d. Sept. 19, 1864. In 1861, after an academic education, he entered the Military University at Norwich, Vt., and late in 1862 at Concord, N. H., he drilled recruits for the Fourteenth N. H. Regt. and became Captain of Co. I. At the battle of Opequan Creek he was acting as Lieut.-col. and was one of the first men killed. His colonel, Robert Wilson, speaks of him as follows:

"Capt. Chaffin was always distinguished for his good soldierly qualities; his steady observance of duty under all hardships and trials, and they were many and often times vexatious. I never heard a word of complaint or grumbling from officers or men of Co. I against their captain, either for severity of discipline, or injustice in the management of company affairs. He was one of my most reliable officers, and when directed from headquarters to detail an officer for particular duty, requiring decided courage, a cool head under high responsibilities, and a thorough determination to do the duty with which he should be intrusted, I often selected Chaffin for its performance. His care for the privates of his company was untiring, and he generally reported more men fit for duty than any other company of the same size. In the summer of 1863, Capt. Chaffin was sent with a detachment of about sixty men to the front, near Rappahannock, to return a body of convalescents to their several regiments. When near his destination a large army train, loaded with fixed ammunition, was attacked by one hundred and fifty or two hundred of Moseby's guerrillas disguised as Union soldiers. Several of the drivers were killed, the harnesses were cut, nearly two hundred mules were run off, and some wagons plundered of loose articles, when Chaffin and his men came up at double quick, saved the train, dispersed the guerrillas, and recovered one hundred and thirty or one hundred and forty of the mules.

“During the voyage to New Orleans, in March, 1864, we encountered a severe gale, lasting five days, and no person on the vessel expected to escape from going down; yet Chaffin was active and efficient in the preservation of good discipline and in exciting cheerfulness among the men. ‘In a reconnoissance in force, made Sept. 5th, 1864, near Berryville, Va., by order of Gen. Sheridan, the skirmish line consisted of some troops from New York which did not advance with alacrity and boldness sufficient to satisfy our commander, and I was directed to call for volunteers from my regiment to perform that duty. Capt. Chaffin immediately stepped forward and offered his services. His offer was accepted, and he proceeded at once to push the enemy vigorously. The service was one of great danger, but there was no farther complaint from our general in command of lack of energy and daring in the skirmishers. I resigned, and on the evening of Sept. 7, 1864, received my discharge, and was no longer in command. Twelve days afterward the little battle of Opequan Creek occurred, and poor Chaffin, with many other brave men and officers, gave their lives for their country.’ His body fell into the hands of the enemy, but was afterward recovered and buried by his men. Soon after his death his father died, and the funeral sermon of both, at the same time was preached at the Congregational Church by Rev. E. W. Clark. He left a mother and one brother, and many friends to mourn his early death.”

Congress in Wisconsin, 1882, and in Illinois in 1902, and in Arizona in 1910. He was a candidate for Attorney General of Wisconsin in 1886 and 1900, and of Illinois in 1904; for Governor of Wisconsin in 1898, and for President of the United States in 1908, and for the latter office received more than a quarter of a million votes. After practicing law at Waukesha more than twenty-five years, on Oct. 1, 1901, he removed to Chicago, Ill., to be superintendent of the Washingtonian Home, where in two years and seven months he had under his care more than 3000 drunkards. In Oct., 1909, his family removed to Arizona, and now (1912) they reside at Tucson.

In Dec., 1910, he was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of the United States on motion of Senator Robert M. LaFollette, who was a classmate when they were boys. He was a delegate to the National Prohibition Convention in 1884 and to every one since. He has given his entire time to platform work for the party and for Chautauquas since 1904.

His ability as a public speaker has been recognized by the press notices of his lectures which highly praise his oratorical efforts. To the Chaffin family it is a matter of pardonable pride to know that they can claim as one of them a man who has been a candidate for the presidency of the U. S. 162

ORIN PENFIELD (Orin 87), b. in Windham, Me., July 4, 1836; a man of real enterprise and very versatile talents, who could do almost anything he set his hand to. The following sketch, condensed from his own personal statement to the author, verifies the remark just made. The author ventures the assertion that no other Chaffin ever took up so many kinds of business and had such a varied business experience.

Orin P. was left a fatherless boy at the age of sixteen, the oldest of seven children, whom he and his mother supported. He worked two years on a farm; then "a job on the river"; then worked on the Cumberland Canal; then in the woods, logging, etc.; then "worked on the pond and river"; then learned to make powder kegs for Goff & Linsey and was soon given charge of the business and held it about three years; then, to quote him, "I built a one-story and a half house, ell and stable, and thought I was about ready for a wife, and so at the age of 22 years I married Mary Manchester, and we started in for a little family." The keg business becoming slack, he went to buying lambs and cattle; then took to driving an ox-team; then at cattle and lambs again; then drove a butcher's cart; then back to farm work for a while; then worked for the Gambo Powder Co.; then back to the powder keg business; then stocked and conducted a grocery store in Portland, Me., but soon sold out; then enlisted in the Twelfth Maine Regt for one year as wagon master; after an honorable discharge returned home and made molasses barrels; then worked for the Massachusetts Powder Co.; then three years more at the powder keg business; then a year's spell at farming again; then bought a farm for himself at Windham Centre, but sold it in a year; then for two years was in the washing machine business, making what was called the Hall Washer; then back to the powder keg business, making kegs by the piece from the log; then bought a piece of land and built a half mile trotting park, fenced it in and had the county fair there, but sold it and then went back to his first love, the keg business, which seemed to have a great attraction for him, and was in it seven or eight years, meantime erecting a set of nice buildings in N. Windham; then went to farming again, raising sweet corn for a company of which he was agent for about three years; then for six or seven years in the wood and lumber business; then "I wanted something new," he said, and with two others he went into the ice business, but it proved a bad year for it and involved a loss of about $20,000; then he went into the wood business again, but the company he was interested in dropped out of the business and left him with about 1800 cords of wood on his hands, and he never got enough out of it to pay for the cutting and hauling. In 1904 he struck into the horse business at Cumberland Mills with J. A. Trafton and continued in it about seven years, going to Chicago once a month and bringing home a carload of horses each time. At the time of going to Cumberland Mills he took charge of a hotel called the White House, and ran it at a profit about a year. He then went into the horse business with Jonas Edwards of Lewiston, Me., buying horses for him in the West, but after about eight months he went into company with Mr. Trafton again for two years, but later went to buying horses for other parties, but finally had to quit business because of an accident received on his way home from Chicago two years previously. "I then," he writes, "returned to my former home at N. Windham, where I have remained ever since, occasionally trading a little but not to any extent." Can any other Chaffin show a more varied business experience?

IRA ERWIN (Norman 92), b. Aug. 18, 1868, in Orrville, O.; has given the writer of this sketch a detailed account of his life from which the following interesting quotations will be made.

J. P. CHAFFIN

Learning that Rev. W. L. Chaffin was working on this history, he writes his brother, "This is the first notice I ever received that there was a Rev. in the relationship. That accounts for me being so good. I left old Wayne Co., in Ohio, in Nov., 1887, and went to Vistula, Ind., and cut cord wood the first winter for my living. In the spring of 1888 I went to Uncle Hiram Chaffin's at Virden, Ill., and hired out as a farm hand for three months, when I was what the doctors call 'heat struck,' and had to quit work, and went to Raymore, Mo. Then I worked on a grading outfit in Kansas City until the fall of 1888, when I went to Marysville, Mo., and worked on a stock raising farm. About Christmas of the same year I worked on a grading outfit in southwest Dakota, grading for the B. & M. In May, 1889, I went to Denver, Col., and, work being scarce, I bought two blankets and hired out to work on the section at Nyssa, Idaho, and by paying $2.00 was shipped to that place, which was in sage brush about five feet high, with a section house and water tank and no other houses in sight; and things looked pretty dreary and lonesome at $1.40 per day, and $4.50 per week for board. After breakfast with Biddy at the section house I signed the board order, which was necessary for her to get her pay from the R. R. Co. I then traveled all the way by foot to Baker City, Ore., where I received the position of stationary engineer in Bennett & Sons sawmill seven miles west of Baker City, at $35.00 per month, which certainly looked big for me for twenty-six days' work, every Sunday off and nothing to do but fish, hunt deer in season, and hunt grouse, which were choice eating. I worked in this saw mill until they shut down for the winter, on account of snow, and when paid off I had $135, which was more than I possessed at any one time in my life before. As I left home with only $5.65 and had to buy my R. R. ticket for 200 miles, I now, with this $135 in pocket, felt almost able to shake hands with John D., the oil magnate.

"In Jan., 1890, I went to Pocatello, Idaho, and got a job of the O. S. L. R. R., as hostler's helper, but on May 23 the company got hard up for firemen and sent me to Montpelier to fire on an extra list which lasted for about three years, when I received a regular engine in freight service. After eight years and four months, on Sept. 10, 1898, I was promoted as an extra engineer. After a year and two months I got a regular engine in freight service, but on Nov. 18, 1909, I fell heir to a regular passenger run between Montpelier, Idaho, and Green River, Wyo., which I have up to date (Oct., 1911).

"I have built a nine-room house and have it all furnished, and have a small barn, a cow, and a horse for the benefit of my family and myself."

Ira Chaffin, who gives this interesting sketch of his experience, is a fine example of what an energetic, temperate, hardworking man who saves his cash and prudently invests it, can accomplish. He owns 160 acres of grazing land in Oregon and a town lot in Lake View.

GEORGE WILLIAM (William Franklin 130), b. May 15, 1845, in Winhall, Vt.; m. at Searsburg, Vt., July 4, 1866, Lucie Maria Wheeler, dau. of George and Mary M.; b. Sept. 6, 1848. The compiler of this history will defy anyone to produce any Chaffin more maimed and mangled, or more brave and cheerful to bear painful misfortunes than the subject of this sketch; and this astonishing chapter of accidents is best narrated in his own words, and they are as follows:

“George Wm. Chaffin’s Misfortunes and Blessings—and he is living still. While working in a furniture factory in Westhaven, Mich., where I went to set up machinery for D. M. Estey of Brattleboro, Vt., while running a moulding machine for rounding corners of panels for furniture, the board caught on a knife, throwing my hand onto the knives and tore my hand badly, taking off my middle finger from the left hand. In two weeks I was back again at work, the wounds not all healed, but doing well. In the fall of that same year my wife’s health required that she should return to Vermont. I then worked in furniture shops and as head-sawyer in mills as I found employment. In Aug., 1879, while tightening up a nut on a saw-harbor, the wrench slipped and my right arm was thrown on a circular saw, and cut so badly that I came near bleeding to death. But my hour was not yet.

“In the winter of 1884, while running a circular saw, my glove caught on a set-screw and pulled out my thumb on my right hand, taking a cord ten inches long from the scar where the arm was cut with the big saw in 1879. The cord was so badly mangled at that time it was weakened and therefore broke, and otherwise I would have been drawn onto the saw, and all would soon have been over. In the year of 1891, while working for the Livermore Bros. in S. Londonderry, Vt., in a steam mill, in stepping over a shaft near a bridge-tree, the hem of my pants caught on a set-screw and wound me around, tightening and tearing my clothes. I threw my arms around the shaft to save my head, and the clothes gave way and I was landed on a wood pile about fifteen feet away, stripped of all my clothing except shoes and socks, one ear torn up from my head, the other torn down, but not clear off. I was skinned as my clothes came off, so the blood just oozed out of the inner skin, no bones broken, but neck nearly so and just as black as though I had been hung. I could not hold up my head, only as I carried my chin in my hand. For several days I was nearly used up, but not quite; the Lord had more in store for me.* On Apr. 28, 1898 I had another sad experience while working for Mr. Towles in Winhall, Vt. As I was running a moulding machine like the one I ran in Michigan, the board slipped on the pattern and threw my sleeve so that it caught on the knife and took my arm below into the machine and took out three inches of bone, so that I lost my left hand and part of my arm. I was in very poor health and was thought to be in consumption, but in twelve weeks I was up again and out, with a hook instead of a left hand, and I was mowing grass to feed my team. I then learned to be a crayon painter and a photographer, and have worked at that somewhat and keep busy, for I am ambitious to earn my bread and care for my family." Thus ends George W.'s graphic narrative. His pluck, enterprise, patience and cheerfulness in distressful circumstances, his determination to do his very best even with heavy odds against him, shed lustre on the Chaffin name and well illustrate the Chaffin motto "Nil Desperandum." He went to California Mar. 13, 1904. Children of George William and Lucie:

 iv. BERNARD ELBERT, b. Mar. 21, 1887. Lives at home (1911).

P. S. George William's hard luck still follows him. Since the above account was written he has fallen from a roof and seriously injured his wrist! What will next befall him?

ALBERT E. (Winslow 133), b. in Princeton, Mass., July 4,

* The compiler of this book has a better opinion of the Lord than to make Him responsible for these painful mishaps. He does not believe in the Devil, but if he did he would regard such cruel happenings more in his line than in the Lord's. On second thought George W. will doubtlessly agree that want of care on his part rather than intention on the part of his Maker sufficiently accounts for these accidents.

APPENDIX A

THE CHAFFINS IN ENGLAND

The most important question concerning the Robert Chaffin family is that of its origin and antecedents. As the meagre history of the few Chaffins in New England prior to Robert's appearance did not reveal his parentage here, it was natural to look for it in England. The author therefore instituted inquiries in England to discover, if possible, the immediate ancestry and place of birth of Robert. While this search has not been successful it has brought to light much interesting information concerning the Chaffin race in the Old Country which the American inheritors of the name will be glad to learn about. The author was most fortunate at the start in forming an epistolary acquaintance with Thomas H. Chaffin, Esq., of Taunton, England, with whom he has been in constant correspondence for nearly a year. It is impossible to give adequate expression to our indebtedness to Thomas Chaffin. He has taken the liveliest and most intelligent interest in the subject, has been unwearied in his efforts to secure desired information, making careful investigations at considerable expense and conducting a large correspondence in England, and has transmitted to the author the results of his efforts by frequent letters, and the author, for himself and for the American Chaffins, hereby expresses his most grateful appreciation for the service he has rendered. We are glad to be able to present to our readers a picture of our English kinsman to whom we are so greatly indebted; the badges worn by him show him to have reached the most advanced position in the Masonic Order.

Thomas Chaffin is a member of the famous firm of John Chaffin and Sons, F.R.P.S., photograph artists, Taunton, England. The superior excellence and success of their workmanship may be inferred from the fact that the author has seen, on a single card, fifty photographs of medals awarded this firm from all the principal cities of Europe. Specimens of this work have been kindly sent us by Mr. Chaffin and are in the highest style of photographic art.

It can hardly enter into the scope of this work to present the English Chaffin lines in detail, but some general information of interest may well be given. An English writer states that there are three families of Chaffin mentioned in "Burke's Encyclopedia of Heraldry," viz.: Chaffin or Chafin of Chettle, Co. Dorset, arms, Gu. a talbot pass, or; Chaffin or Saffin, Co. Somerset, arms, az. 3 estoiles of 8 points, each issuing from a crescent, or; Chaffin, Warminster, Wilts Co., arms, Gu. a talbot pass, or, a chief ermine. The name was spelled Cheffyn in the reign of Edw. I. The name has, however, been subject to considerable variation, the most common form being Chafyn, this being the form used in the church books in the parish of Mere, Co. Wilts, where the Chaffins were very numerous for several centuries. Six descents are given of them in the Visitation Book of that county in 1565, (2) Warminster, (3) Bulford, (4) Sealey's Clevedon. In the parish of Mere (5) of Mere, originally of Folks, Co. Dorset. The Chaffins of Chettle intermarried with Bampfylde, Trenchards, Sturts, Penruddocks, etc. The southwest counties of England, Wilts, Dorset, Devon and Somerset seemed to be the natural habitat of the Chaffin race. County Wilts appears to have had many Chaffins in the sixteenth and following centuries. The author obtained a copy of the marriages, christenings and burials of persons named Chaffin (Chafyn) recorded in the church books at Mere, Dorset Co., from 1562 to 1687. Of christenings there were 28, of marriages 6, and of burials 31. He received from Thomas H. Chaffin, before spoken of, a copy of a pamphlet of over 100 pages entitled, "Notes on the History of Mere," which has many interesting accounts of Chaffins. For example, Thomas Chaffin had a grant of the parsonage and titles of Mere for sixty years. This was in 1533. But Lord Stourton obtained a later right to the same and forcibly seized Mr. Chaffin's sheep. On July 12, 1551, "servants of Lord Stourton armed with weapons entered the demesne lands of Mere and took prisoner Thomas Hopkins shepherd to Mr. Chafyn and carried him to Stourton House and kept him in prison some days. August 12th. They again went to the folds of Mr.

THOMAS H. CHAFFIN, TAUNTON, ENGLAND

Chafyn and took 240 sheep which they drove to Lord Stourton's grounds and by his command proclaimed them in the markets as strayers and still detained them. August 22nd. Lord Stourton attended by his men armed entered the demesne and drove out 1000 sheep of Chafyn's and impounded them. Mr. Chafyn served a replevy for their delivery, in spite of which they were detained. August 24th. Lord Stourton and his servants entered the barley fields and carried away 40 loads of barley and innyd it. They further threatened the sayde T. Chafyn at any time to slaye, kill and hurt hym, hys sonnes or servaunts if they were taken upon the sayd demesne lands." (Wilts Arch. Mag., viii., 305.)

Two years after this Lord Stourton "caused a barne of Thomas Chaffyn to bee sett on fyre by iij of his servantes; agaynst which Chaffyn for that he sayed yt was not doon withowte the knowledge of the saide Lord Stourton or of some of his servantes, Lord Stourton tooke an action and recovered of him £100 damage for the payment of which he took owte of Chaffyn's pastures by force 1200 sheepe with the woll uppon their backes, all the oxen, kyne, horsstes and mares that he coulede fynde in the said pastures." (Strype's Historical Memorials.)

One Dr. Thomas Chafyn was Vicar of Mere from 1630 to 1646. He was also Rector of Fovant, Co. Wilts. He was loyal to the King in the Cromwellian war. Walker, in his "Sufferings of the Clergy," says:

"This worthy Dr. was by the Oliverian Soldier dragged out of his House and barbarously Abused by one of the soldiers; who kick'd him brutally, and afterward forced him to Mount on a poor Galled Horse's Back without Saddle; and so in that disgraceful manner they carried him to Fisherton Prison, where he continued some few weeks; but finding him to grow Weaker, they sent him home; where, after a few days, he died with the Anguish of the aforesaid Grief; Plundering his House and Stable of all his Goods and Horses; leaving his Relict and Family in a Forlorn and Mean Condition."

Earlier than this, in 1556, Richard Chafyn was Vicar of Mere and served as such for thirty years. In 1583 William Chafn was Reeve, i.e., the person who had the supervision of the Commons, and in 1584 Edward Chafin held the same office. In 1586 and 1587 William Chafyn was church warden at Mere and in 1610 Thomas Chaffin, gent., was the same.

Several Chaffins of England have been members of Parliament. Bampffield Chafin, Esqr., was a member from Bridport and was "besieged by a small detachment of the Parliament Army in his own house at Folke, and taken prisoner. Died at Exeter in 1644." Leo Chaffin, Esqr., who died Sept. 7, 1766, represented the county of Dorset in Parliament for forty years, a man of great popularity. Thomas Chaffin, Esq., who commanded a troop of horse raised in Dorsetshire against Duke Monmouth, had a son, George, who was a M. P. for Dorsetshire. Rev. William Chaffin was Vicar of the parish church of St. Mary, Taunton, England, from 1756 to 1803. The author has a picture of a very distinguished looking person, William Chafyn, Sheriff of Co. Wilts, 1885. He also has a photograph of James Chaffin, who died May 9, 1911, who was three times Mayor of Bath, England, 1878-80.

All these facts go to show that the Chaffins were numerous and influential in the southwest of England for many years. They were known as far back as the reign of Edward 1—1272-1307—and probably much earlier. They do not appear to be numerous now.

The following notes are worth adding: One of the earliest Chaffins, prior to 1498, was John Chafyne of Salisbury, Co. Wilts. In Hutchin's Dorset is this statement: "The family of Chaffin originally came out of Wiltshire. In the Visitation Book for 1565 there are six descendants of them given, some of Warminster, but most of them of Mere, both in Co. Wilts." In 1562, July 27, William Chaffyn married Mary Crouch. In 1632, May 29, Thomas Chaffin, D.D., Vicar of Mere, married Barbara Hyde at Hatch. At Salisbury (Wilts) Mr. Thomas Chaffin married Lady Hawkes. At Wareham (Dorset) Richard Chaffin, Aug. 1, 1639, married Audrey Checkford of St. Edmunds. July 8, 1643, Bampffield Chaffin, Esq., was buried in Exeter (Devon) Cathedral. He was of Dorsetshire. On July 14, 1658, "Mrs. Lady Chaffin of the Close married James Marsh of Grey's Inn, Esq." In the “Visitation of Dorsetshire,” Thomas Chafin of Mere, married Joan Daccomb, date not given. In the same is an extract from of will of Sir John Horsey, dated Apr. 9, 1589, a gift to Thomas Chafin of “a ring of angel gold with this superscription, ‘Vita brevis, amicitia longa.’” In letters about the Regicides (Mass. Hist. Soc. Coll, Series 4, Vol. 8, p. 180) is this: “Westminster, October 23, 1661, Capt. Chaffin et als. were imprisoned in the Gate house, Westm. during trouble about the Regicides.”

Thomas Chaffin of Chettle was M. P. for Poole, Co. Dorset, from 1679 to 1687, and for Dorchester from 1699 to 1710. The last of the name in Chettle was the Rev. William Chaffin, an author, a son of George Chaffin, and had four brothers and six sisters. He was a keen sportsman. His hounds killed the last marten-cat known to be seen in the County of Dorset. He died in 1818.

The above notes, and many similar ones that might be quoted, show that formerly there were many Chaffins in England, chiefly in the southwestern counties. The name seems now to be uncommon in England. Several persons of the name, applied to for information by persons of the same name, were surprised to learn that there were any other Chaffins than themselves in the country. It is, therefore, noteworthy that whereas there are now few of the name in the mother country, the race is, as this book proves, very numerous in America. In the vegetable world transplanting often causes a largely increased growth, and so the transplanting of the Chaffin race from the Old World to the New has promoted its large increase here. May they maintain here in America the excellent character and standing that distinguished the family in England.

APPENDIX B

THE TRADITIONAL WELSH ORIGIN OF THE ROBERT CHAFFIN FAMILY

The tradition of the Welsh origin of the Robert Chaffin line entertained by early members of the family, and the assertion of a Tennessee Chaffin family that they had the same origin, seemed of sufficient importance to merit investigation. The author, therefore, through a Welsh newspaper, The Drych, published in Utica, N. Y., made this question the subject of inquiry. In the issue of July 25, 1912, a Welsh scholar, Rev. John Cadwallader of Oak Park, Ill., wrote a learned article in answer to this question. The first paragraph of this article is here presented for the edification of the reader.

The reader will of course be greatly disappointed that he is not allowed to peruse the whole article as printed in the original. But he will perhaps forgive the author of this history if he is presented with a translation. This is accordingly given here. It was made by Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones of All Soul's Church, Chicago, Ill. The question was presented to the aforesaid Welsh newspaper of Prof. ApMadoc. The following is a translation of the reply:

AN ANSWER TO THE INQUIRY OF PROFESSOR APMADOC

If I am correct in my theory it is altogether probable that the Rev. W. L. Chaffin of North Easton, Mass., is justified in assuming that he is descended from a Welsh ancestry.* It is altogether probable that the family name has passed through certain typical transformations in its passage from the original root form to its present Anglicised form, thereby making it more available to the tongue of the Englishman. I feel quite certain that the Cymric original of his name is Cyffin, or as it is more often written, Kyffin. It is quite according to the law of transmutation that it should become Chaffin. The name Kyffin springs from Cyd-fin, i.e., cydderfyn, the mid-limit, or between two shires, towns, farms or cabins, etc., etc. There are a number of places and towns and many families in Wales that carry this title to this day. I know of a town by the name of Cyffin, near Conway in Carnarvonshire. In this town was born and raised the sculptor, John Gibson, of eminent fame.

I remember in my reading of coming across persons of eminence bearing the name of Cyffin, or Kyffin. In the year 1485 there was one Richard Cyffin, Dean of Bangor and Parson of Llanddwyn, in Anglesea. Again, Morris Cyffin was second son to Richard Cyffin, Esq., of Glasgoed, Llansilin of Sir Ddinbych. This was a gentleman much honored. In 1595 he published a Welsh translation of the work of Bishop Jewel, entitled "The Defence of the Faith of the English Church." He is represented as a literateur and bard of real power.

In 1571 one Rosser Cyffin was one of the notables of Arovonion and the parson of Llanberis. Then there was Sir Thomas Cyffin from the family of Maenan near Llanrwst. He was attorney during the reign of Queen Ann. He died on the 20th of September, 1745, was buried at Llanddoged near Llanrwst where there is a monument to him.

There is an able contributor to the Dysgeddyd (the Educator) in the neighborhood of Llanfyllin by the name of Cyffin, who writes of the antiquities of his country, and I have no doubt but that this gentleman is conversant with the history of the Cyffins in the principalities, and the manner and the time of the emigration of some of them to America, particularly if some of them are found among the Welsh Quakers who emigrated to Philadelphia in the early days.

I also remember coming across an interesting family by the name of Kyffin in Denver, Colo., a few years ago. They had come from the neighborhood of Llangollen. They were a much respected and intelligent family and doubtless they could give some history of the Cyffins to the Rev. W. L. Chaffin. That is, if our theory of the transformation of the name is correct.

Such is the translation of the article in question. It would appear from it that the name Cyffin or Kyffin was the Welsh equivalent of Chaffin, and was not uncommon and had an honorable place in Wales and in Welsh history. By a regular law of linguistic transformation Cyffin or, as it was more often written, Kyffin, when Anglicised became Chaffin. This discussion shows the possibility that there may be some ground for the tradition in the Robert Chaffin family that it had a Welsh origin, but that is all. The subject, however, seemed to be of sufficient interest to be presented here.

APPENDIX C

THE EARLIEST CHAFFINS IN NEW ENGLAND

As Robert Chaffin, the first known ancestor of the family with which this history is chiefly concerned, is first seen in Concord, Mass., in 1719, at his wedding, it is natural to suppose that he sprang from one of the earlier Chaffin families of New England. But there is no evidence whatever that such was the case. No Robert appears among their children. The consideration of those first Chaffins is rendered very difficult by the confusion regarding their names. Savage in his Genealogical Dictionary considers them under the three names, Chaffee, Chaffin, Chaffy, and there are at least four other names applied to them. The earliest one of the name appears to be Matthew, who was made a freeman in Boston May 17, 1637; a ship carpenter; owner of a house in Boston, 1640; and later, paid a tax of sixpence a year on land on Long Island at Boston, 1648; bought and afterwards sold a farm in Newbury (see Suffolk Deeds). But as the records give him the name Chafie, Chaffie, Chafe, Chafey, Chaffe, besides the name of Chaffin, we may dismiss him from further notice. He evidently belonged to the Chaffee family—his wife was Sarah.

The next name to consider is David Chafine, so called as owner of "a house in the Comon" (Boston) "as early at 1665," and "his relict since hath built." She was "Lidiah Chafine," and also called Cafine, 1681. The record of their children is as follows:

Sarah of David and Lydia Chapin, b. May 3, 1659.

Hannah of David and Lydia Chappine, b. Oct. 23, 1661.

Ebenezer of David and Lydia Chapin, b. Feb. 3, 1664.

The wife, "Liddia," was excommunicated from the church in 1669. She d. Dec. 22, 1708. Almost undoubtedly this name was Chapin.

Next appears a Caleb, who in 1695 is taxed as Caleb Chaiffin in Boston, and in 1698 as Calef Chafin, whose family record follows:

Hannah of Caleb and Sarah Chapin, b. Jan. 4, 1681.

Lydia of Caleb and Sarah Chapin, b. Mar. 15, 1683.

David of Caleb and Sarah Chapen, b. July 2, 1690.

Ebenezer of Caleb and Sarah Chafin, b. Jan. 29, 1693.

Caleb d. Feb. 14, 1693. He was unquestionably Chapin.

This brings us to Ebenezer, probably son of David above. He m. before 1690 Elizabeth, dau. of Nehemiah Adams of Boston. He was a resident of Boston. The following is his family record:

“Eliz. of Ebenezer & Eliza Chafein, b. Apr. 5, 1693.

Mary of Ebenezer & Eliza Chapin, b. July 1, 1694.

Eliza, dau of Ebin & Eliza Chapin, d. Aug. 23, 1694.

Ruth, dau. of Ebenezer & Elizabeth Chafen, b. May 28, 1701.”

There is convincing reason that this also was Chapin, not Chaffin.

In 1662 and later there was a Josiah Chapin living in Braintree, Mass., a person of considerable importance, whose name is sometimes given as Chaffin, but only by misunderstanding. The same blundering occurs in the case of Thomas Chaffee of Hingham, Mass. The uncertainty regarding the names of these persons of early New England named in this notice and sometimes called Chaffin, has convinced the author that our Robert was an emigrant and the first Chaffin to settle here. To this conclusion he has come after a very thorough study of all the evidence bearing on the subject.

APPENDIX D

THE CHAFFIN FAMILY OF VIRGINIA

The author's original design in compiling this Chaffin History was to include only Robert Chaffin and his descendants, the family dating from about 1700, then living in Massachusetts. But he soon learned that another and very important Chaffin family started about the same time, located early in Virginia and spread thence, into the Southern and Western States. A tradition became current that the above named Robert and a brother John, landed together in America from England, one settling in Massachusetts, and the other, John, in Virginia. This tradition may represent the fact, but there is no evidence to substantiate it. Finding that the Virginia family was extensive and prominent, the author concluded to present a sketch of it, not an elaborate genealogy, as in the Robert Chaffin line, but at least an outline sketch with as much detail as his time allowed him to present. To collect material for the earlier members of this Virginia family was a much more difficult task than in the case of the Robert line, because the early Massachusetts public family records are incomparably superior to those of the State of Virginia.

For this reason the author is unable to give any connected account of the earliest Virginia Chaffins. He was told that the founder of the family was John, who settled in Middlesex County, but nothing definite further than this can be told here. For the other data, respecting early members of this family, the reader is indebted to Charles A. Flagg, of the Library of Congress, of Washington, D. C., a valued friend of the author, who most thoroughly and kindly searched both printed and manuscript records of the library bearing on the subject.

The first Chaffin he found was JOSHUA, who in Sept. 1758, received twelve shillings and six spence for damage done to a horse that was impressed from him for defence against the Indians; then in Lunenburg County. He may therefore have seen Indian fighting, as the stories related by descendants, will show that other Chaffins did. This Joshua was one of the best known of the early Virginia Chaffins. He lived in Amelia County. He was a Revolutionary patriot and served as a fifer, receiving for his pay, £1, 3s and 4d per month. The Chaffins have always been a musical race, and with Joshua there served also a relative, perhaps a brother, JOHN CHAFFIN, who was a drummer and in the Revolutionary service also. It is interesting to picture these two patriots, John and Joshua, marching side by side to battle in Washington's army, wakening the echoes and rousing their comrade's spirits with fife and drum by the thrilling music of Yankee Doodle.

This Joshua was succeeded in Amelia County by another JOSHUA CHAFFIN, undoubtedly his son, who became very prominent in public affairs, and this speaks well for the eminence of the family in Virginia. In 1800, he is a trustee of Jefferson College, in Amelia County. In 1818, he was an incorporator of a company for the improvement of navigation. But earlier than this, in 1795, he was "appointed a trustee for the cleaning and improvement of Appomatox River." He was living as late as 1848, and at that time with others, he protested against the formation of another county out of Bedford, Campbell and Pittsylvania Counties.

Two soldiers of Washington's army, Joshua and John, have been mentioned. John served for three years and received a bounty for his service, and probably a grant of land. On Jan. 5, 1809, he married Elizabeth Booker, a bride a good deal younger than himself, b. Aug. 11, 1782; d. May 2, 1815. He was alive as late as 1830, for he then petitioned for the redemption of $24.76 distrained from him for taxes on land.

The indications are that these Virginia Chaffins were most patriotic, for others are named as Revolutionary soldiers. ISHAM CHAFFIN enlisted on June 28, 1776, in Capt. John Morton's Company of the 4th Virginia Regulars, and was a pensioner as late as 1835 and perhaps later. CHRISTOPHER CHAFFIN did the same and he and Isham became Revolutionary pensioners, Christopher being alive in 1835. SOLOMON CHAFFIN is on record as a pensioner as late as 1830. In 1787, there were two others receiving land grants, undoubtedly for service in the war for Independence, JOSEPH, who had a grant of 250 acres in Charlotte County and THOMAS, who had 190 acres.

The above makes a splendid record for the Virginia family, and doubtless there were others, who were in the Revolutionary service whose names are not on public records. This is evident because the family sketches that follow speak of Revolutionary ancestors whose names do not appear above.

For the valuable sketches of branches of the Virginia Chaffin family that are here given, the author is mainly indebted to Mrs. Marie B. Forbrich of Brooklyn, N. Y., a member of the family. A sketch was promised and long expected from a prominent member of the family in Virginia, but who at a late hour, declined the work. No time was then left for as complete an account as was desirable. But learning of the situation, Mrs. Forbrich offered her services, which were eagerly and gratefully accepted by the author. With most commendable enthusiasm, ability and industry, she did her utmost, in the limited time at her disposal, to secure from such members of the Virginia family as she could learn of, some account of their respective family lines, and these she carefully remodeled for publication, and they are presented below. She desires that all Tennessee and Virginia Chaffins and all descendants of the Virginia family shall send her information regarding them, as she contemplates compiling a complete history of the Virginia family in the future, directing it care of Rev. W. L. Chaffin, North Easton, Mass.

In the short time that has been devoted to the Virginia line of the Chaffin family it has been impossible to trace back to the common ancestor, therefore, different branches of the family are given separately, viz:

THE OHIO BRANCH

SOLOMON and Catherine Chaffin, of Virginia, the former probably born about 1745, were the parents of five sons, viz:

Second Generation

Simon (not sure of name), lost track of on leaving Virginia.

John, lived and d. in Bainbridge, O.

Solomon, settled near Bainbridge, O.

Robert, went south, probably to Tennessee.

William, b. Sept. 2, 1775, in North Carolina; d. in 1859, 84 yrs. of age; m. Jan. 7, 1802, Mary Brown, who was b. July 1, 1783.

At an early age William Chaffin returned with his parents to Loudoun County, Virginia, where he grew to sturdy manhood. He was noted for his great physical strength and fearlessness. Poor in this world's goods, yet he was an "honest man, the noblest work of God." His grandchildren still cherish fond and pleasing memories of "Grandad" in his old age, sitting about their father's great, old fire-place, filled with blazing logs, entertaining them through the long winter evenings with thrilling adventures of the woods, blood-curdling encounters with Indians and narratives of weird, curious and uncanny things he had met across in "Old Virginny."

His marriage with Mary Brown was a run-away match, and the pursuit was so close that the stalwart young Carolinian and his beautiful Maryland bride were joined in marriage on the bridge at Harpers Ferry. It was happy union, although the fair young wife became an invalid in later years. She was a woman not only beautiful in person, but possessed of a fine mind and an exalted Christian character, which enabled her to bear the ills to which human flesh is heir patiently and philosophically.

In a year or two after their marriage this pair emigrated to Fayette County, Ohio, where they lived the remainder of their lives. To them were born eight sons and one daughter, viz:

Third Generation

David, born Dec. 7, 1802, died Nov. 28, 1806; Solomon, born Nov. 7, 1804, died in 1863; James, born Mar. 4, 1807, while his parents were on way to Ohio in wagon, died in 1881; Smith, born Oct. 4, 1809, died Dec. 24, 1889; Robert, born Jan. 10, 1811, died in childhood; Martha, only daughter, born Dec. 24, 1813, married David Shaw; William, born Apr. 7, 1816, died in April, 1890; Hinton, born May 10, 1820, died in young manhood; and John Wesley, born July 17, 1823, died Feb. 27, 1892.

All of these children who reached manhood and womanhood were possessed of sterling traits of character. Solomon, the eldest, was a man of exalted Christian ideals, as conscientious a man as could be found in all the country. He raised a large family, two of the sons serving in the Civil War. James was an honest, industrious, upright man, and was noted for his wit. "Uncle Jim," as he was familiarly called by all his acquaintances, was the life of any company in which he was found. He with his staid and quiet wife raised a family, the descendants of whom are "making good" in the world. Martha was a handsome and vivacious girl, who developed strong and intelligent qualities as a matron. She married David Shaw and settled on a farm in Shelby County, Ohio, where they raised a large family of bright children. Smith was a man of fine mental power, of a logical turn of mind, skilled and capable in debate, and if trained and educated would have made his mark as a statesman. Turning his attention to business he was very successful and he and his wife became among the largest land-holders in Fayette and Pickaway Counties, and large dealers in live stock. Politically, Smith Chaffin was very positive and pronounced in his views and convictions. So strong an Abolitionist was he before the war that he withdrew from the Methodist Episcopal Church, because she permitted slavery to exist among her members. For many years, therefore, he affiliated with the Wesleyan Methodists, but returned to the old church after the Civil War had settled the great question. From its organization he was an ardent supporter of the Republican party, finally going with the Liberal Republicans and voting for Horace Greeley, as their candidate for President. Jan. 7, 1830, he was united in marriage with Susan Shepard, only child of Jonathan and Elizabeth Shepard, Virginians also, of Loudoun County, who had emigrated to Ohio. The chosen wife, born Dec. 25, 1807, was a woman of remarkable mental powers and a superb equipoise of temperment, and pursued the even tenor of her way, full of the heroic, with a heart by faith made strong, by hope made light. She came of Revolutionary stock and was the niece of John Chawpe, the intrepid young Virginian to whom General Washington intrusted the hazardous enterprise of attempting the capture of Benedict Arnold, after his betrayal at West Point. To this couple were born four children, mentioned in the "Fourth Generation."

William Chaffin was a man of strong character, an honest, God-fearing and industrious man who raised a large family of children, who reflect credit on their parents. They are mostly prosperous farmers. John Wesley Chaffin, the youngest son of William and Mary Chaffin, was a most brilliant preacher, journalist and author. He early sought a thorough education and being possessed of a very attractive personality and a consecrated purpose, he won his way wherever he went. He filled with acceptability many prominent pulpits in the Middle West and edited several journals. He was the author of the books: "The Battle of Calvary," "Memory's Golden Urn," and some other productions. His last years were spent in Cedar Rapids and Council Bluffs, Iowa, honored by all who knew him.

Fourth Generation

The children of Solomon Chaffin were John M., an attorney, late of Red Cloud, Neb., now deceased; Burris W., Battle Grand, Ind., now deceased; Noah, Minnesota, now deceased; William, Texas; Mary, wife of Rev. J. C. Clemans of the Central Ohio Conference, Findlay, O.; Sarah Isabella, wife of Rev. F. M. Clemans of the Cincinnati Conference, now deceased; and Josephine Chaffin, of Indiana.

Children of James Chaffin were Smith, a Methodist minister of Jeffersonville, O.; James D., New Holland, O., who did heroic work as a soldier in the Civil War; Samuel Mc., now deceased, his family in Chillicothe, O.; Mrs. Elizabeth Poole, Washington C. H., O.; Mrs. Rebecca Dundon, Loveland, Col.; and Solomon, of Washington C. H., O., who is now past 80 years of age.

Of the large family of children of Martha Chaffin and David Shaw we have only the name of Mrs. J. T. Black of Sidney, O., who is prominent in missionary matters in the Presbyterian Church.

SMITH CHAFFIN

MRS. SUSAN SHEPARD CHAFFIN

The children of Smith Chaffin and Susan Shepard were Miranda, who m. William Daugherty, who died in a year, she subsequently marrying George Vlerebome and raising to maturity three children, mentioned in fifth generation; Jonathan, who m. Elizabeth Adams and raised five children, all of New Holland, O., and d. in 1902; James, who lost his life in the great Civil War and lies buried in the big National Cemetery at Nashville, Tenn. He volunteered in less than thirty-six hours after Mr. Lincoln's first call for troops, and started at two o'clock in the morning for the front. He was a participant in the first Battle of Bull Run. He gave his life a willing sacrifice upon the altar of his country. With wonderful tenacity of life and remarkable fortitude he kept with his regiment and rode his horse when so reduced that he had to have a pillow across the saddle. Perhaps no man in the army was imbued with purer or more patriotic motives or with higher ideals of what constitutes good government. Clara, the youngest of the family, was b. Jan. 6, 1846. She graduated from college with classical honors in 1866. In 1868 she resigned a position in her alma mater to marry Maxwell Goddis Clarke, son of Rev. J. W. Clarke, of the Ohio Conference, a cousin of Dr. Adam Clarke, the celebrated linguist and commentator. Two children were b. to this marriage, Earl Chaffin, dying in infancy, and Guy Max, who passed away May 23, 1893, in his twenty-third year. He had just completed a full university course and was characterized by the president of the institution, now Bishop Bashford of China, as the most brilliant young man who ever went out under his administration. Mrs. Clara Clarke is now the wife of Rev. F. M. Clemans of the Cincinnati Conference. She is establishing a professorship in philosophy in the Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, O., as a memorial to her son, Guy Max Clarke.

Of the large family of children raised by William Chaffin we have the names only of John Wesley, now residing in New Holland, O., and Mrs. John Michael, also of New Holland, O.

H., O., father of Stanley; and FRANK A. CHAFFIN, Washington C. H., O., an attorney.

Louisa and Joseph Hardy settled on a farm in Hancock Co., O., which they cleared and improved and which became one of the best in that part of the state. In later years it was found to be located in the gas and oil region. Mr. and Mrs. Hardy both lived to a good old age and were laid to rest in Ohio.

Solomon Asbury Chaffin was left motherless at one year of age and encountered many hardships under the care of a stepmother, to which the pioneer life in a new country added much. It is said that he attended school only one half day in the summer time, but succeeded in obtaining a fair education attending the winter schools. Many a day he worked for the sum of 50 cents per day, walking a mile or two to his work and working an hour or two before breakfast. When a young man he worked two seasons in a river fishery. He was a small man, weighing only from 120 to 130 pounds, but very quick and active. After his marriage he continued on the farm until in the spring of 1854, when he came with his brother, Wesley to Michigan, who removed there at that time. On seeing the new country with its great forests he foresaw that it would some day be a great country and resolved to settle there too. He worked his way back to Ohio, a distance of over 200 miles, the best he could, there being no railroads through Michigan at that time, and made arrangements to move in the fall with his family and in company with his sister Mary and her family, which move they made with ox teams bringing their little belongings and driving two cows before them the 200 miles distance. After being two and a half weeks on the road, walking in mud, fording streams, cutting roads, and enduring all kinds of hardships, they reached the land of promise. About this time there had come to this great, new land a considerable number of other enthusiastic homeseekers who were striving hard to maintain their own until they could get a start. Fortunately there was plenty of game and so the people did not starve.

Mr. Chaffin bought a farm of ninety acres in North Star township, Gratiot Co., of a Mr. Barnaby, who had put up a small log house and stable and had chopped and partly cleared a couple of acres.

In this new country there were many hardships to endure, such as weevils in the wheat, no mills nor markets nor roads, and the early frosts, but these young people were courageous and ambitious and willing to do their part in return for what they sought, of that class of truest and purest Americans.

There was a grist mill at a place called Fish Creek, thirty or forty miles away and the farmers would take turn about hitching two ox teams to a wagon and driving there, being gone four days and four nights. Mr. Chaffin walked many times to a town called St. Johns, a distance of about twenty-two miles as they had to go at that time, following a path, wading through water and mud, and brought back in a bag some groceries, plow-paint, etc., and made the round trip in one day.

But there were some good times for these early settlers as well as the many hardships, some of which were in attending logging bees, house raising and helping to make the roads as in those days they were all like brothers and sisters and the opportunity to visit while working made it like a holiday. The latch strings of their homes hung outside and all were welcome. They thought nothing of taking a team of oxen and a long sled and going five or six miles to meeting or spelling school.

Mr. Chaffin lived on his farm for fifteen years, having cleared some sixty or more acres, cutting and splitting the rails to fence the same, and having put up all new buildings, set and raised a nice orchard, besides doing much work away from home. Everything had to be done with the axe and hand spike as the cross-cut saw was not heard of at that time. The price for felling an acre of timber was $4 and one had to board himself at that. Mr. Chaffin cut many acres for others. In the fall of 1869 he sold his farm and bought another in Fulton township, Gratiot Co., on which he lived until his death.

He joined the Methodist Church soon after coming to Michigan, of which he was always a true and faithful member, singing the good old hymns of long ago. He had many friends all over the country, as he was always as pleasant, honest and upright as any man could be. He d. at the age of nearly 53 years, of abscess of the liver. His wife, Lydia M. C., survived him as his widow for twenty-one years, living with her oldest son, Oliver N. Chaffin, on the old home farm. She d. of pneumonia and was laid to rest in Fulton Center Cemetery, Gratiot Co., Mich.

Mary Ann (Chaffin) Fairchilds Nelson, who moved to Michigan with her family and in company with her brother, Solomon Asbury, also settled on a farm in North Star township, Gratiot Co., which they bought of a Mr. Tead. After the death of Mr. Fairchilds his wife continued on the Michigan farm, caring for their three children and also after her marriage with Mr. Nelson and until 1861, when they sold the farm and bought another in Fulton, Gratiot Co. In 1863, Mr. Nelson went to the war and served until its close, being engaged in several battles. During the long absence of her husband, Mrs. Nelson, with the aid of her children and the help of a few neighbors continued farming. After Mr. Nelson's return from the war they engaged in the buying and selling of real estate until about 1887 when they removed to Nebraska, where Mr. Nelson d. about 1905. Since then Mrs. Nelson has made her home with her children, some of whom are living in Michigan and some in Wyoming. At the age of 81 she made the trip from Wyoming to Michigan unattended. She is very active and has a fine memory for one of her age.

Hannah Chaffin Nelson and her sister, Mary Ann Fairchilds Nelson married brothers. Hannah moved with her husband from their Ohio home in about 1866, he having accumulated quite a considerable amount of money during the Rebellion, and invested in an excellent farm near Fulton, Gratiot Co., Mich. After some years they removed to Ithaca and then to Detroit, Mich., where Mr. Nelson d. about 1910. Mrs. Nelson raised a second family of three grandchildren, whose mother d. when they were small.

With the aid of two of these she has, since her widowhood, operated a boarding house.

Children of Charles Amer Chaffin:

Oliver N. Chaffin was but one year old when his parents moved from Hancock Co., O., to Gratiot Co., Mich., and he was then their oldest living child. In this new country his parents had brought him to, he grew to manhood, sharing with them the hardships and toil incident to the pioneer life, and being the oldest of a family of six children, it fell to his lot while only a young boy to do the work of a grown man, which he did, and still found time, by utilizing his spare moments studying hard at his books, to obtain a fair education. He continued to work for his parents until he was 21 years of age and then began for himself, farming the old home farm on shares which he continued to do for twenty-five years without having a contract drawn and without having a word of dispute or trouble! When he was 24 years old his father died. He continued to live with his mother for one year thereafter when he was united in marriage with Luelda Laycock under the same ceremony with his sister Louisa and Mr. Allen and commenced housekeeping in a tenant house on the old farm, but still looked after his mother and her younger children. In 1887 he bought a part of the old farm and moved into the larger and better house with his mother. Three years later he built his mother a new house close by where he could look after her and her belongings, which he did until her death in 1899, her children then settling up her estate among themselves without having it probated, Oliver N. Chaffin buying the balance of the farm.

During these many years Mr. Oliver Chaffin has been engaged in many pursuits besides farming. He has been and now is engaged in breeding and raising thoroughbred stock, horses, cattle, hogs and poultry. He has shipped poultry and live stock for a number of years, and sold farm machinery, sewing machines, pianos, organs and small musical instruments. Being a natural musician himself, as many Chaffins were, he was very successful in the sale of musical instruments, as he was also in other things. He has bought and sold farms, but has always kept to the old farm that he and his family have lived on these many years. He has also kept a systematical book account of his business affairs for forty-three years, both of his cash accounts and of his farm crops. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Chaffin are the proud parents of seven daughters and two sons, all of whom have marked musical ability. Children mentioned in fourth generation.

Christina Chaffin Francis, being the oldest daughter of her parents, also shared in the toil and hardships of pioneer life with them until her marriage at 19 years of age, and then with her husband on the farm they rented. For a time fate seemed against them; they sustained losses of live stock, and then their household goods by fire, but by courageous perseverance they overcame these things and now own a good farm only a mile from a thriving railroad town with a good graded road therto. But, unfortunately, Mrs. Francis has lost her health and suffers from nervous and rheumatic trouble. Mr. and Mrs. Francis were the parents of two daughters, but not a son; therefore, when little Royce Gool, who was born, Feb. 7, 1893, in Perrinton, Mich., was left motherless at two and a half years of age, his mother dying of consumption, they adopted him as their own son. He is now a bright young man and a comfort to them in their old age.

LUCINDA CHAFFIN, his sister, was b. Aug. 18, 1838, a robust young woman, who looked after her mother when her brothers were in the war, and managed the farm. She m. Edward Downs, who was a Union soldier and fortunate enough to return home. They lived in Michigan and had two sons and three daughters, and when these were grown up they went to Toledo and engaged in mercantile business, but finally went back to farming. The Downs had several other children, but there is no space here to report them in detail.

MRS. ALICE A. PRINCE

CHARLES AMES CHAFFIN, another son of John C., was b. Sept. 5, 1840. He m., Jan. 31, 1867, Eleanor E. Gear (?). He also was a Union soldier, had several children, lived in Michigan, and after the death of his wife, in July, 1881, and his mother, a few years later, he became quite a traveler, going all over the U. S., but then settled in a soldiers' home.

There are many other details that might have been added had the data forwarded come in season, before the copy had all gone to the printer.

THE TENNESSEE BRANCH

The Tennessee Chaffins are perhaps all, or nearly all, descendants of a Virginia ancestor who came from England in Colonial times and settled there, some of the younger generations later pushing out into the newer lands of Tennessee, as well as of Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Missouri, and later to the Gulf, to the Pacific Coast and to Canada.

Among these early dwellers in Virginia was one who served his country loyally in the struggle for independence and who raised a large family of children. For some time this family lived in Harpers Ferry, where at least two of the children were born. These two were MOSES CHAFFIN—born about 1783—and ROLAND CHAFFIN, a younger brother.

When the sons of this large family grew to manhood they emigrated to other states, some going north, and Moses, Roland and another brother going south to Tennessee, finally making their permanent home in Columbia, Maury Co., where some of their descendants now live.

During the War of 1812 Roland Chaffin fought under General Jackson, and while engaged in the Battle of New Orleans saw Packenham, the British commander, killed.

Moses Chaffin married in 1808 a Miss Jane Jones of Raleigh, N. C. Their children were GARLAND, born Oct. 9, 1810; WILLIAM BENJAMIN, born Apr. 25, 1813, and MARY ELIZABETH, born Dec. 30, 1816.

Jane Jones, after the death of her husband, Moses Chaffin, married his brother, Roland Chaffin. To this later union one child was born—GREEN T. CHAFFIN.

Garland Chaffin was killed in a storm during the early fifties while traveling in a boat down the Mississippi River. He had an interest in the boat and in property in Natchez, Miss., to which place he was going at the time of his death.

William Benjamin Chaffin lived his entire life of eighty-two years in Columbia, Tenn., an honored and highly esteemed citizen. When he started out as a young man to do for himself, he had had the advantages of a good home and rearing, and was poor in this world's goods, but he was industrious, with a determined perseverance, sober, honest, reliable and thrifty, and soon established himself in business.

About the age of twenty-eight he married Miss Amanda Adkison, daughter of Samuel Adkison, one of the most prominent, influential and well-to-do residents of that part of the State, and of one of the oldest families of the South. With the financial aid he then received from his father-in-law, he developed his business—that of wagon manufacturer—and established a comfortable home in Columbia, Tenn.

His fair, young bride was only a girl in her "teens," but possessed a sterling, womanly character, intellectual and capable as well as deeply spiritual, sweet and gentle. A loving and inspiring companion, she was a true helpmate, and with loyal, untiring ambition she helped her husband establish himself and accumulate for the years to come and for their children all that he ever possessed. But being unmindful of self to a fault, she assumed duties beyond her strength, which indirectly caused her death when their third child was six weeks old. Seeing that death was at hand, she requested that her infant be named for herself—Amanda Patience Chaffin—bade her husband a fond farewell, and with the twenty-third psalm on her lips, feebly repeating "The Lord is my Shepherd," her soul passed to Him in whom she had trusted. She was laid to rest in the family burying plot in Rose Hill Cemetery, Columbia, Tenn.

The children born to this union were Beatrice E., born in 1844;

MRS. MARIE B. FORBRICH

Louise, who died in infancy, and Amanda P., born July 10, 1849, the latter being the only surviving member of this family.

Seven years after the death of his first wife, William Benjamin Chaffin united in marriage with Margaret Martin.

He was an unassuming man, quiet and lenient in his home life, a peaceable neighbor and an exemplary citizen. He died July 10, 1895.

To this later union were born: Nellie, who died in infancy; Laura, who married Chas. Parker, and William Martin, born Mar. 28, 1871.

The children of Laura Chaffin and Chas. Parker are Laurence, Charles and William Martin Parker.

William Martin Chaffin married Linda Frierson. At eighteen years of age he went to work in the Maury National Bank, Columbia, Tenn., where he has since been, being now assistant cashier.

MARY ELIZABETH CHAFFIN, daughter of Moses Chaffin, and who was known as Betsy, married William Weaver. They made their home in Huntsville, Ala. To this union twelve children were born, only three of whom now survive, namely, Ellen, Mrs. Ida Williams and Mrs. Lulu Harris. Among the children who have passed beyond were Henry, a kind and most devoted brother, a Mrs. Kate McGee and a Mrs. Seat, whose son William now resides with his wife and son in Chicago, Ill.

GREEN T. CHAFFIN, son of Roland Chaffin, whose home adjoined that of his brother William for many years—until his death—was in character much the same as his brother. Both were remarkably quiet. It has been said that, although always on the best of terms, and although their yards joined, they scarcely spoke more to each other than to pass the time of day, unless on visits or other special occasions.

Green T. Chaffin married Miss Nancy Dowell, and of the large family born to this union only four lived to maturity, namely, William T., Frank D., Elizabeth and Louise.

William T. married Miss Partee. The seven children born to this union are William, Oscar, Louise, Nellie, Mamie, Theodora and Walter. Frank D. and his twin sister Elizabeth have never married. Louise married Frank Rushton of Birmingham, Ala., a prosperous business man, and to this union two children were born, namely, Frank and Louise. While these children were yet small their young mother died, whereupon her unmarried sister, Elizabeth, devoted her life to their care and rearing. Frank, Jr., is now married, has six children, and lives in Birmingham, Ala. Louise married a Mr. Crouch and lives at her father's home.

William T. and Frank D. Chaffin have for many years been partners in a wholesale and retail grocery business, also have other enterprises, and are prosperous and respected citizens of Columbia, Tenn.

Beatrice E., first child of William Benjamin Chaffin, was much like her mother in character and temperament, was deeply spiritual and noted for her quiet, gentle and sweet disposition. She had marked musical ability, which she faithfully developed. She married Chas. Nichols, a young Confederate soldier of sterling character and a kind heart. She died a few years later when her only child was but two and a half years old. With almost her last breath, she joined her voice with others who were singing at her request "Jesus, Lover of My Soul;" and thus her saintly soul passed on to join that of her mother.

Her son, William T. Nichols, now resides in Nashville, Tenn., and has three sons and three daughters, namely, Louise, who is married and also has a son; James William, Laura Beatrice, Cleo Clifford, Howard Sidney and Allen, the last three mentioned being yet in school.

Amanda P. Chaffin, widow of Thos. B. Selders, third child and now only surviving daughter of William Benjamin Chaffin, who is remarkably like her father in character and temperament, is a strongly intellectual, courageously resourceful and capable woman. The most marked characteristic of her entire life has been her long-suffering patience. Married at an early age, she never discontinued studying, was much given to reading and the pursuit of knowledge and to inspiring her children in the same way. When the mother of nine children she was able to pass the U. S. Civil Service examination at the top of the list and was appointed instructor and in charge of a department in the Government Schools, which position she has now held for about ten years, keeping her younger children in school nearby. Her present address is Lawton, Oklahoma, Box 248.

She united in marriage Sept. 3, 1865, at the early age of sixteen, with Thos. B. Selders, an officer in the Union Army, now deceased. The nine children born of the union were: Alice, who m. George Melville Prince of Chicago; became a widow in three years; in 1907 entered the Chicago Kent College of Law and graduated with the degree of LL.B. in 1910; in 1911 was awarded the degree of LL.M.; D. Edward, Van Orin, Ill., dealer in farm implements, elevators, engines, etc., inventor of the D. E. Selders Power Transmitting Apparatus; father of two daughters and one son; Thomas Benton, a machinist, living in Toledo, Ohio; Mrs. Marie Beatrice Forbrich, formerly a public school teacher, recently teacher and principal of a department in Wood's Business School in Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. Myrtle Rader, formerly U. S. Government Court reporter in the Spanish Treaty Claims Commission, Havana, Cuba, now residing in Los Angeles, Cal.; Oliver M., attorney-at-law, graduate of the Illinois and De Paul Universities of law; admitted to the Bar in 1907, and in 1908 admitted to the Bar of the U. S. District Circuit and Appellate Courts for the Northern District of Illinois; m. Dr. Eda Bergquest, a prominent physician of Chicago; Alonzo F., employed by a railroad company; Joseph Grant, a bookkeeper, and Raymond E., still in school.

APPENDIX E

DOLOR DAVIS AND HIS DESCENDANTS

The sketch of the Davis family given below is very important, since all the descendants of Robert Chaffin, who, April 15, 1719, married Abigail Davis, have Davis blood in their veins, and are proud to have it. The sketch was kindly prepared by Hon. John Davis Long, a friend of the author, and one of the most honored citizens of Massachusetts, whom all the Chaffins are glad to claim kinship with, even though a slight one. Mr. Long was in the Massachusetts legislature four years, beginning in 1875, and was the speaker there for three years; Governor of Massachusetts from 1880 to 1883; in Congress from 1883 to 1889; Secretary of the Navy from Mar. 2, 1897, to May 2, 1902.

The genealogy of the Davis family in Massachusetts is easily traced. Dolor Davis, born about 1600 in Kent, England, was, on Aug. 4, 1634, granted 25 acres of land in Cambridge between what are now Dorchester and Holyoke streets. He had married, about 1624, Margary Willard. She was the sister of Simon Willard, who came to Boston in 1634. His brother-in-law, Dolor Davis, probably came with him. Simon Willard's later prominence in the colony is well known. He was one of the foremost men in early colonial times, the starter of three towns, Concord, Groton and Lancaster, and a commander during several Indian campaigns, whence his title of major. Dolor Davis, whose home in Concord is still pointed out, co-operated with his brother-in-law in founding Groton and was one of its first selectmen, though he does not seem to have taken up his residence there. His two sons, Simon and Samuel, many of whose descendants have achieved distinction, were born in Concord and remained there after their father moved to Barnstable. Dolor made Barnstable his home, and the dam built by him is still to be seen. He was a carpenter and builder, which perhaps accounts for his frequent change of residence, new fields furnishing new employment. He was a man of the strong good sense and sterling qualities which brought him into frequent public service, and which have been the characteristics of the Davis family ever since.

His marriage to Margary Willard united two prominent families which have contributed an unusual number of distinguished names to Massachusetts.

Dolor Davis was the ancestor of three governors of that commonwealth, Governors John Davis, George Dexter Robinson and John Davis Long, as also Horace Davis, now of San Francisco, and formerly member of Congress from California, Judge Bancroft Davis, Frances E. Willard, two presidents of Harvard College, Captain Isaac Davis, killed at the Concord fight, and many others, who, though holding less distinguished positions, deserved them quite as much.

Indeed to separate the Davises or any one of them from the Massachusetts make-up would be like drawing a thread out of the interwoven web of a roll of cloth, so identified are they with the affiliations, characteristics, traditions and influences of Massachusetts from its earliest colonial days. Intermarried with numerous families, as with the Chaffins, whose genealogy is set forth in this volume, their ramifications have spread far and wide, for Dolor had three sons and three daughters, five of whom married and had large families, one of them twelve children.

It may well be claimed for Dolor and Margary that they have contributed their full share to the blood and spirit of the commonwealth.

JOHN DAVIS LONG.

APPENDIX F
NEW ENGLAND CHAFFINS OF UNIDENTIFIED
PARENTAGE

It has sometimes happened that births were not reported, or town clerks neglected to record them, and so there have been sons and daughters born whose parentage is unrecorded. This is one of the worst trials of the genealogist. The author has encountered quite a number of Chaffins of this class whom he could not, therefore, place in their regular line of descent. There have been various births, marriages and deaths in New England, whose parentage has not been identified. As the author has found no Chaffins in this section who were not of the Robert line he is positive all of this class named below are also of this line.

One of these is NATHAN, who was b. in Acton, Mass., Dec. 29, 1800, and d. July 16, 1878. He was a farmer in Acton, a man of character. On Oct. 20, 1837, he m. Abigail R. Oliver of Acton, b. July 30, 1817, dau. of Abijah and Elizabeth Oliver; d. in Bedford at the home of her son July 4, 1911, almost 94 years of age. In many ways she was a remarkable woman, of strong character, fine judgment and unusual ability. She never required the services of a physician until her last illness, which lasted only a few hours.

"Mrs. Chaffin was one of the most remarkable women ever born in Acton, on account of the wonderful sagacity, industry and executive ability, which characterized her through the whole of her life and the continuance of these qualities, together with mental and physical vigor, to a very rare age. With her, life was not labor and sorrow after three score and ten. Even after she was four score and ten she was able to do more for others than she needed to have done for herself. She even made her own gowns and always in style, and was planning another when called away after an unconscious illness of only a few hours. She passed her last years not only in the possession of the comforts, but of the luxuries of life, as one of the greatest satisfactions her son has had in his pecuniary success has been the ability which it has brought him of contributing to his mother's happiness."

How fine a tribute to the son is this concluding sentence! The children of Nathan and Abigail are as follows:

- i. ABBY MARIA, b. Nov. 14, 1838; d. Apr. 28, 1885.
- ii. NATHAN LUCIEN, b. July 12, 1841.
- iii. ELIZABETH AUGUSTA, b. Dec. 27, 1842; d. Jan. 12, 1885; m. Oct. 13, 1872, Woodbury E. Hall, son of Ezekiel and Jane S., and had children: 1. Cora, who d. 9 mos. old. 2. Arthur, d. 6 mos. old. 3. Lizzie, b. Dec. 30, 1884; m. Arthur Allen of Vermont and lives in Leominster, Mass.
- iv. CLARA AMELIA, b. Sept. 26, 1848; m. in Stowe, Mass., Jan. 15, 1874, Samuel P. Brackett, b. 1842, son of Edwin and Mary B.; no children.

NATHAN LUCIEN, son of the above, b. July 12, 1841, in Acton, Mass., started a restaurant in Boston, first in Scollay's Building and later on Cornhill, and did a successful business for about 35 years, living at the time in Arlington. He then retired to Bedford, Mass., where he built a house and where he now lives. He m. in Brighton, June 8, 1870, Florence S. Horne, b. Mar. 16, 1853, in Brighton, dau. of John and Eunice. Children are:

- i. FLORENCE, b. and d. Apr. 28, 1871.
- ii. IDA M. F., b. Sept. 26, 1872; d. July 1, 1875.
- iii. WALTER DWIGHT, b. Aug. 27, 1876—was with his father in the restaurant business and is now in the Boston Tavern.

Another example of a Chaffin whose birth and parentage failed of record is that of ALVARO L. CHAFFIN. This is unfortunate, for he served his country for a year as a soldier in the Civil War.

He was b. in Dartmouth, N. H., 1845. On Aug. 5, 1864, he enlisted for Claremont for one year in Co. A, New Hampshire Heavy Artillery, and was discharged Aug. 7, 1865, at Concord, N. H. He is now disabled and demented, an inmate of the Sullivan County, N. H., Farm Home at Unity. He m. Isabel E.

Wheeler, b. Mar. 12, 1847; d. Sept. 24, 1905; b. and d. at Newport, N. H.; dau. of Briant and Mary (Wakefield).

Of the unidentified Chaffins named below it is to be noted that the names Chaffee and Chapin were sometimes mistaken for Chaffin, and there is, therefore, a chance that some of the Chaffins whose names follow may be really Chaffee or Chapin.

David Sampson and Mary Chaffin, m. June 5, 1712. (N. E. Hist. & Gen. Register, Vol. vi, p. 348.)

Joseph Chaffin and Marvill Davis, m. in Boston, Sept. 12, 1765. (See New North Church records.)

Otis Chaffin and Margaret Cross, m. Apr. 26, 1807.

David Chaffin and Hannah Kiblec, m. Dec. 12, 1805.

William Chaffin, b. Apr. 25, 1853; son of Bennet & Frances.

Abbie M. Chaffin, d. Apr. 30, 1885, ae 46, 5, 14.

Henry Chaffin, d. Dec. 29, 1902, ae 75, 1. These last five data are from Boston records.

APPENDIX G

THE OLDEST CHAFFIN HOUSE IN AMERICA

A picture of this house accompanies this sketch. The house is in the west part of Acton, Mass., and was built in 1749-50 by John Chaffin, the first American-born Chaffin of the Robert line. The house faces the south. It originally contained but four rooms, one to the right of the front door, the other to the left, with a chamber over each of these rooms. The window projecting from the roof is a later addition. Originally the rooms were unplastered, and only two are plastered now in the old part of the house. One lower room has the original boarded wall, which has been papered. A stout beam runs through the ceiling in the middle. The large stone chimney once there has been replaced by a smaller brick one. There were fireplaces for warmth and for the cooking in the early days. There were no clapboards on the house then. It was painted red and the door was green, and it is the same today, although clapboards have been added. After the family of John, the builder of the house, had passed away, there were always two families at a time living there, small as the house was, but some additions to it were subsequently made.

There was once a shoe shop and a hop house near by, but these have disappeared. A pig pen years ago graced the east end of the house, with a walk only wide enough for one person between it and the house—a pen odorous at all times, the occupants furnishing music when hungry and eventually filling a barrel with fat salt pork, one of the mainstays of the table in the winter. The pigsty was, however, banished years ago.

There was once an old fashioned cider mill on the place, where all the neighbors used to bring their apples to make their winter's cider. On winter evenings one of the Johns spoken of above commonly sat near the fireplace where a bright fire blazed and crackled, with his pan of apples and mug of cider on the fire-frame near by, while his wife knit stockings for twenty-five cents per pair for the small sized ones, knitting larger ones for twenty-five cents when the yarn was furnished, while the younger daughters would spin and weave, one spinning wheel being left in the house still, but the loom has disappeared. Some Indians lived across the pond and often came to the house for a drink of cider. Young John was a boy then and sometimes thought he had to draw cider a little too often, and then he would partly fill the mug with water from the cellar bottom and add some cider afterwards.

After many years several rooms were added to the rear of the old house, two of them serving for sleeping rooms and one for the kitchen. As the farm is now, there are about ninety acres under a good state of cultivation, with about seven hundred apple trees. Chaffin families, descendants of the first John, have always occupied the house, for although the present owner is Mr. Antoine Bulette, he married a Chaffin, and his son by adoption, Frank Bulette, a son of Lucia Chaffin Wyman, will inherit the house after him. About twenty years ago Mr. Bulette built a conservatory eight by eight feet on the east end of the house. He planted the first Baldwin apple tree ever set out in Acton, and thus appears to be an enterprising man.

The house was built, as before said, by John the son of the first Robert, and in it were born all but the first one of his children. The second family to occupy the house was that of John's oldest son, Jonathan, whose six children were born there. He died in 1790, and his widow survived him 47 years. His successor was his son John, who married Naomi Chesman, and their eleven children saw the light of day for the first time in the east room of the old house. A lively household it must have been as the children grew up. Feeding time for them was an interesting occasion. A big pan of hasty pudding was placed upon the center of the table, with a bowl and spoon for each, unless they took turns, the mother and father sitting at the table with as many children as there was room for, the rest standing about or sitting in any convenient place to eat. Not that hasty pudding was their only food, for the farm provided poultry, mutton, veal, beef and pork, and the woods about them were well stocked with squirrels, rabbits, partridges, quails and pigeons, the latter coming in those early days in such countless numbers to their roosting places as to break down the branches of the trees as they settled for the night. Some persons were not too fastidious to eat a skunk that had been so carefully dressed and well cooked as not to remind the eater of its well known peculiarity. Milk was plentiful and the brick oven furnished abundant supplies of baked beans, pies and puddings.

APPENDIX H

MODES AND HABITS OF LIVING IN EARLY DAYS

The foregoing sketch of the oldest Chaffin house naturally raises the query as to the kind of country home-life in New England in those earlier days. This query will be in part answered by what follows. The contrasts presented between the old-time ways and our own of these later times will be interesting and instructive. The cooking was done in the fireplace, the pots and kettles hanging over the fire on pothooks supported by the movable iron crane. Meat was roasted in the "tin kitchen" placed before the fire, although fresh meat was seldom used. The large bakings of bread, beans, pies and puddings were done in the brick oven. Sometimes a large batch of pies and puddings were baked at once in cold weather, and then allowed to freeze so as to be kept for weeks and months and to be thawed out and used as wanted. It was almost 1850 before the stove came to supersede the fireplaces in this old house. Take a look into the room, and you will see a row of crookneck squashes hanging about just out of reach.* If you are in there at the right time you will see the occupants paring and quartering apples and stringing them on twine by darning needles and hanging them about the fireplace to dry; or they may be dried in the sun in favorable weather. A whole barrel of boiled cider apple sauce was made each fall. Squashes were cut into long strips and hung on poles placed about the room out of the reach of the head.

They made their own soap, hard and soft. They made their own candles, both dipped and run into moulds. In the west room was a light stand where the candles, with tray and snuffers, used to stand: but sometimes the candles would be snuffed by the thumb and finger rather than with the snuffers. They raised their own sheep and sheared them. They carded, spun and wove their own

*This suggests the lines from Lowell's Courtin':

An' in amongst 'em rusted
The old queen's-arm that Granther Young cloth, both wool and linen, for men's and women's wear. They made their own bedding, woolen and linen, pieced their own quilts, had their quilting bees, when neighbors came in to help, and jolly times were enjoyed. In the old house now is a blue and white woolen spread woven by the second John's wife, Naomi. They knit their own stockings and mittens in those days. They made their own butter and cheese, using the cheese press, over which suspended a large stone hung on a line to be let down when the cheese was ready to be pressed. They weighed their butter with rude scales with a one pound stone on one end and the butter at the other end. They used the dash churn, churning from fifteen minutes to two and three hours. The wooden butter tray and butter spatters are still to be seen in the old house. The milk pans were of brown earthen ware.

Instead of the warm rooms and beds of modern days they slept in winter in cold rooms, too cold for water to be kept in them, and in the morning they took turns washing at the sink and sharing the common roller towel. The old warming pan is still in this house, with which the chill was taken off the beds of the young children and of aged persons. Fire was kept over night by heaping ashes on the coals in the fireplace. Sometimes the fire died out and then, as it was before the invention of friction matches, someone must hustle off to borrow coals of a neighbor, or sparks must be struck from flint into a tinder box holding some easily ignited material; but this was apt to be a tedious job.

They dyed their wool for their clothing. In order to give the yarn a clouded appearance corn husks were tied in sections about the skein before it was dipped in the dye. Corn husks were used to fill the under bed ticks, feather beds being placed on top of them. Corn husks were braided together to make door mats. In summer the women and children of the house picked huckleberries, keeping them in tubs and boxes in the cellar, and sending them to market each week.

In anticipation of a shortage of the milk supply in midwinter, milk, when plentiful, was sometimes put in large tubs in early winter and allowed to freeze solid and was kept so and when needed for use pieces were chopped out and thawed.

The corn, wheat, rye and flax were raised upon the farm, carried to mill, ground, and used at home. When John, Jr., born in 1808, was a small boy he used to take the wheat and other grains to mill, it being put in large bags and hung on the horse's back, and John himself was tied on the horse to keep him from falling off. These grains were gathered, thrashed and winnowed at home. These are some of the contrasts presented between the old time habits of country life and those of the present day.

For these two sketches, one of the old Chaffin house and this one on early modes of country home life, the writer is mainly indebted to Miss C. A. Jewett, who has lived in this house for about fifty years. May she continue to live there as long as life is desirable to her.

To this account of early New England home life a few additional statements may be made. Then, salt beef and pork were the only meat in common use. When a "critter" was killed fresh meat could be had for a little while, but most of it was salted down. The butcher's cart was unknown until later days. The bread was seldom made of wheat, but rather of rye and Indian meal, and this in milk was apt to constitute the breakfast and supper, although bean porridge or "hasty pudding" sometimes varied this monotonous repast. Potatoes although not unknown were not in common use. The salt beef or pork, boiled with vegetables, was the usual dinner; occasionally, however, an Indian pudding boiled in a bag was added. There was game in the woods, rabbits, squirrels, partridges, quails and pigeons, and in rare cases, as before stated, even the flesh of a skunk was used. The writer has known of a man in his town who enjoyed this and pronounced it delicious eating. Fish abounded and the boys often caught perch, hornpouts, trout, pickerel and eels. Persons living near the shore might have lobsters, oysters, clams and salt water fish. Barnyard fowls, hens, turkeys and geese, with the eggs they produced, added a pleasant variety to the family larder. Altogether our early Chaffins had plenty of good, wholesome food.

Then, the ordinary means of locomotion consisted of an ox-cart, or the back of a horse with saddle and pinion, on which father and mother and several children might slowly ride. A chaise, or even a wagon, was uncommon except with quite well-to-do persons, while for distant travel the stage coach was the needed conveyance. Now electric and railroad lines form a network over the country, while motor cars and flying machines, those modern instruments of destruction, inventions for increasing the death rate of mortals, are everywhere.

Then, information from a distance must come by letter brought by the slow conveyance of stage coach or sailing vessel. Now the telegraph keeps us informed of daily occurrences all over the world as soon as they happen. Events taking place in London may be known here before they happen, so to speak, since what occurs at twelve o'clock, London time, may be known here at seven o'clock, our time, five hours earlier. Had some one told John Chaffin in 1750 that the time would come when one could sit by his fireplace and converse with friends in Boston or New York he would have judged him fit for an insane asylum, except that no such institutions existed at that date. Newspapers and periodical literature were almost unknown. The writer has in his possession a newspaper called "The New England Weekly Journal," of Monday, April 8, 1728. It is a single two-page sheet, seven by thirteen inches in size, counting the margins. The latest news from Europe is about five months old! To confirm what is said above about coffee as a luxury, we read this advertisement. "Choice New Coffee to be Sold by Arthur Savage at his House in Brattle-Street Boston for Eight Shillings per Pound," i.e. two dollars a pound! We may be sure that Robert Chaffin's family seldom, perhaps never, indulged in this extravagance. It illustrates the difference between those days and our own to read in this same paper advertisements of negro slaves for sale! One of them is as follows: "A Very Likely Negro Girl, about 13 or 14 Years of Age, speaks good English, has been in the Country some years, to be sold, Inquire of the Printer hereof." Contrast this seven by thirteen inch, two-page, weekly newspaper with our modern papers! And those early papers were costly and had a very limited circulation. The literature read in some of our early Chaffin homes consisted of the Bible, The New England Primer ($2\frac{3}{4} \times 4$ inches) with board covers, having among other execrable cuts, "the burning of Mr. John Rogers," who, dressed in his clerical best, looks as though he enjoyed the performance, "his wife, with nine small children, and one at her breast, followed him to the stake," and, facing him in three ranks of four each, lacking one, look on complacently with hands folded. Besides these two books will be found the spelling book, Watt's Psalms and Hymns, perhaps also Michael Wigglesworth's "Day of Doom," that epic of hellfire and damnation which was widely read and deeply venerated, so popular that there was sold in its first year one copy to each thirty-five inhabitants of New England. Fox's Book of Martyrs is perhaps on the selves and Bunyan's Pilgrims' Progress also, and a few other religious books. Most read of all, perhaps, is the Farmers' Almanac. Hardly ever a story found its way into the house. The now ubiquitous magazine was then absolutely unknown. Many of the children grew up without ever seeing a newspaper, and some of them could not have read them if they did, while the frequency with which on old wills and deeds may be read names with "his mark" or "her mark" over them, does not speak well for the penmanship of the persons whose names appear. It must not be inferred, however, that this was a Chaffin peculiarity, for the writer recalls the fact, which he records in his History of Easton, that the children of Rev. Matthew Short, who lived contemporaneously with the first Robert Chaffin family, were unable to write their names when "far along in their teens." And if the minister's children were thus illiterate, what shall we think of others?

It is difficult to appreciate this change in the habits and modes of living, so simple in the old times, and now often so artificial, when luxuries are deemed necessities. The mothers and daughters were all workers. They hired no help, or if they did the "help" were freely admitted to the family circle. These are some of the interesting contrasts between old New England days and the present.

APPENDIX I

OLD AGE

The following sermon is presented here, first, because it was written by a Chaffin, and, second, because he wishes to dedicate it to his Chaffin kindred who have reached, or who will reach, the age of three score and ten years; and he hopes it will be a comfort and encouragement to them, as it has been to many others.

THE SERMON

Text: "The days of our years are threescore years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labor and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away."—Psalm xc. 10.

I have chosen these words to introduce a discourse upon old age because they have been so familiarly associated with the subject, and not because I indorse them; for, while they may correctly describe the old age of the hopeless invalid, the friendless and poverty stricken, and of those who have lived frivolous, selfish, and immoral lives, they are not universally, nor, in my opinion, even commonly, true. There are many serene, peaceful, and happy aged persons whose more than threescore and ten years are not "labor and sorrow," but who still find life worth living, who have many tranquil enjoyments, and of whom it is true that, "If the outward man perish, the inward man is renewed day by day." Who could be happier than the saintly Florence Nightingale, so lately departed, ninety years old, full of blessed memories of unsurpassed service? Who would think of applying the doleful words of the text to Benjamin Franklin, who was seventy years old when he was made ambassador to France, and became after that the most distinguished diplomatist in Europe; John Quincy Adams, "the old man eloquent," at eighty-three years winning a victory in Congress at heavy odds in maintaining the right of petition; Gladstone at eighty-six years, with his majestic outburst of eloquence, appealing to the sympathy of Christendom in behalf of bleeding Armenia; Whittier, Holmes and Bryant singing some of their sweetest songs after fourscore years; Julia Ward

Howe at ninety-one years, with genius unimpaired and interest in philanthropic work unabated; and Edward Everett Hale at eighty-six years the living embodiment of his justly famous saying that thrills with the spirit of youth and manly endeavor,—

“Look up and not down,
Look forward and not back,
Look out and not in,
And Lend a hand”?

These, and many others, “bringing forth fruit in their old age,” as the Bible has it, show that the last days of the aged are not always “full of labor and sorrow,” but may be active, fruitful, peaceful, and happy. Do we not all know aged friends, past threescore and ten and even fourscore years, who bear their troubles with patient fortitude, are cheerful and hopeful, free from querulous complaining and repining, thankful still for the gift of life which they continue to enjoy, all of whom remind us of the beautiful scripture, “At eventide there shall be light?”

But what is old age? When may one be said, not merely to be growing old, for all of us are doing that all the time, but when may one be fairly called an old person? “The easiest thing for our friends to discover in us, but the hardest thing for us to discover in ourselves is that we are growing old.” About twenty years ago two of our citizens, then about seventy years of age, were conversing together in town meeting, and one of them remarked, “Have you noticed that we no longer see old men here as we used to?” And his friend replied, “Ask these younger men about us if they see any old men here, and they will point to you and me and others like us.” We are usually taken by surprise when we first discover that others regard us as old persons. I distinctly recall my first experience of that kind. I had entered a crowded street car in Boston, when a schoolboy kindly arose and offered me his seat. “Why did he do that?” I said to myself. Then I reflected that gray hairs had begun to appear, and I saw that the boy looked upon me as entitled to the deference that belongs to age. And that was twenty-five years ago, when I was only forty-eight years old. It gave me a new sensation when I saw my reflection in that boy’s mind,—a sensation often since repeated. But, then, I remembered that, when a boy in church, in those long-ago days when parents always went to church and took their children with them, I myself regarded many of the worshippers as old persons who had not yet reached the meridian of life.

If we make old age a matter of years only, we can hardly do better than accept the Biblical standard, and admit that threescore and ten years is the limit beyond which persons may properly be called old. Such is the common estimate, and there is no occasion for any of us to feel sensitive about it. But old age is not merely a measure of years. It is also a matter of temperament, of our living interest in things, of our enjoyment of life and the use we make of it, of faith and courage, hope and cheerfulness, friendliness and affection. I know persons past threescore and ten who, in real activity of mind and heart and in cheerful views such as we commonly associate with youth, seem to me younger than others of half that age. Some persons, indeed, are born old and are old all their lives, while others are forever young in spirit, are cheerful, hopeful, see the bright side of things, are pleasant companions, and keep their faith in the loving providence of God. As Dr. Holmes said of Mrs. Howe on her seventieth birthday, "It is better to be seventy years young than forty years old." It is often said that "One is no older than he feels," and, if this is true, many of us now past threescore and ten are still young, and we mean to keep so until the curtain falls. We admit our years, but to find ourselves considered old always takes us by surprise. Indeed, I have known so many bright, progressive, and happy old persons, that I have almost come to think these qualities characteristic rather than exceptional to old age. My observation and such experience as I have justify me in opposing the common impression that old age is a period to be dreaded, a time of special infirmity and decrepitude, of crabbed and querulous dispositions and morose views.

Of course, sometimes disabling sickness, poverty, unhappy domestic conditions, or mental infirmity may overtake one in old age. Father Taylor, broken in health and spirit, was heard in his last audible prayer to say: "Father, what am I here for? What am I doing here? I'm no use to any body. Now, Lord, some morning suddenly snatch me to thyself." But such an experience is exceptional, and we must remember that sickness, misfortune, and the trials of life are not peculiar to old age. They come also to the young and middle-aged, and they must be harder to bear then, for they interrupt the activities, pleasures, and pursuits of life then eagerly engaged in, and they add the sting of postponed or defeated ambitions, whereas the aged have no such activities to be thwarted and can more patiently bear the troubles that come to them. Having outlived expectations, they are freer from disappointments.

If one is not happy in his old age, it is not because he is old, it is because of conditions that would make any age unhappy. I maintain that, instead of something to dread, old age is much more enjoyable than it has the credit of being, and a large amount of contentment and happiness is possible to it. Twenty years ago an aged relative of mine, dying at our parsonage, over one hundred years old, gave this remarkable testimony, "The last ten years of my life have been the happiest I ever lived." She might have truly said what Mrs. Howe once said to her minister: "The lower I drain the cup of life, the sweeter it grows. All the sugar is at the bottom."

The sight of an aged person nearing the bound of life and showing signs of failing powers may to the young and strong seem pathetic and pitiable. Sometimes it is so, but less often than is commonly supposed, for there are gains as well as losses. Many an old age brings with it peculiar blessings and compensations, and may be what sunset is to the day, with a charm and beauty all its own.

Now, for one thing, if we have lived wisely and well, rightly using the opportunities coming to us, we have stored our minds with interesting knowledge, so that life has continually grown more rich and full of things worth knowing, which now we have the leisure to enjoy. If we have, for example, learned to love nature, the sense of her beauty and blessing increases to the last hour of life and gives us unfailing enjoyment. The wonderful sky, with lovely clouds by day and stars at night, the sea, the thunder storm, the summer's beauty, the autumnal glory, the winter's snow, the coming of spring again, the birds, the flowers, the waving trees,—what an increased peaceful joy they give us when we are no longer distracted by the pressing cares and labors of life. As we grow older our sensibilities are not so keen, and we suffer less than in earlier years. Old age is no longer fretted by the heats and struggles that drive and worry those who are crowded by duties and responsibilities. No longer influenced by the competitions of life, with their partizan and personal prejudices, nor swayed by its passions, spectators more than participants, and taught by a large experience, the aged are more sane and wise in their judgments, and, I am sure, more charitable and considerate in their estimate of the conduct and character of others. Conscious of having committed many faults ourselves, we are more tolerant of the faults of others. We may have, alas! unpleasant things to remember,—follies, faults, unkindnesses, and even sins. What would we not give had we not committed them! But I hold that we have the right to be happy in spite of them, provided we have sincerely repented and have done our best to atone for them and to repair any evil we may have done. We may well be humble at thought of them, but God's forgiving peace will come to the truly repentant heart.

One of the best compensations of old age is release from the wearing sense of responsibility which is often more trying than the actual work we have to do. Persons holding positions of trust and business men in the management of large interests, or even in their struggle to support those depending upon them, find this responsibility most taxing. Parents feel it deeply as they think of the temptations and dangers which they must train their children to meet and overcome. The teacher and minister, and many others who have important duties to fulfil and are conscientious about them, know what a burden this is. But, when the age limit is reached beyond which these duties are no longer required of us, we can drop this load of responsibility and feel justified in taking life more easily. The children are grown up, are off our hands, and can shift for themselves, and we no longer have to worry about them. No one knows better than the conscientious minister how great this sense of accountability is for the welfare, guidance, and inspiration of the young and old to whom he ministers. Nor can any one else so fully appreciate his sense of relief and thankfulness when he can rightfully drop this burden and enjoy the leisure and rest so delightful after a long and busy life.

Another advantage of growing old is the increase in the number of our friends and in the leisure to enjoy them; for, the older we grow, the larger becomes the circle of friendship. The deference they pay to age, and the kindness they show, add greatly to the happiness of the aged. Home love, social intercourse, and neighborhood friendliness are most enjoyable at any age; but, because long life enlarges the circle of friends, and, by reducing the number of other enjoyments, concentrates our attention upon them, I think the amount of our happiness from this source is greater the longer we live. I find it so at least. Nor do I subscribe to the common saying that, as we get older, we do not make friends as readily or prize and enjoy them as much as earlier made friends. Long acquaintance may indeed give us more in common with old friends; but one with a large capacity for friendship, which is one of life's richest blessings, finds his enjoyment of friends depends far less upon the length of time he has known them than upon their worth and attractions.

But I may be told that this blessing—the enlarging of our circle of friends incident to age—is offset by the sorrow caused by the increased losses of friends which the aged have to bear. These sad losses, however, come to us in every period of life; and if, as times goes on, the number increases, my observation is that the aged bear them with greater equanimity than younger persons. And all our real friends, whether present with us or gone before us, have added a permanent enrichment to our lives; and, as memory fondly recalls those who have gone, they seem somehow to be with us still, and form part of our real life. Indeed, we must not call them “lost.” Friends who live may be lost through indifference or unkindness, but death saves a true friend in a friendship that shall be unbroken. And, besides, the aged know that at the worst this separation is for a brief time, and cannot long divide them from those they love. It is said that sailors on a voyage at sea first drink to the health of the friends they leave behind; but, when half their voyage is over, they turn their faces forward and drink to the friends before them on the other side, whom they soon expect to meet. So it is in our voyage of life. As we approach the other shore, more and more do we think of those who have gone before us. Time with healing touch has softened the sorrow of parting, and retrospection changes to hopeful anticipation in proportion to our faith in the joy of reunion.

Some persons may, however, think that the shadow of approaching death must darken the lot of the aged and sadden their last days; for, while the young may die soon, the old must do so. But my observation of aged friends convinces me that the thought of death plays a very small part in the experience of those nearing the bound of life, less, I think, than with many in youth and middle life. The prospect of being taken from the joys of youth and the engaging pursuits of middle life is a bitter sorrow, as I myself realized when long facing threatened death soon after entering the ministry. But, when we have had our day and our life's work is done, Nature somehow reconciles us to the coming change, and makes our going as easy as the falling of the ripened leaf from the bough, and may even help us to say with the aged Simeon, "Now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation." Even those who unfortunately think that death means extinction can have no reason to dread an event which, if their belief is true, ends all their troubles. And those who believe in God—as it seems to me every sane mind must—can have no ground for fear to go where the Heavenly Father appoints their lot, for he is sure to be as good to us on the other side of death as he is on this. He made ready for our coming here. He will make ready for our going there.

There is much more to be said upon this theme, but I will close with two observations. First, a word for the young, how shall they prepare for a happy old age? Prepare for it they must in earlier years, if they have it at all; for no greater mistake can be made than to suppose a happy old age can follow a foolish or misspent life. So I would say most earnestly, let them first of all care for their health, keep the body in the best possible repair and vigor so as not to carry into their declining years needless ill-health and suffering. Let them prudently endeavor to lay up something to save them from poverty and dependence on others when age comes on. Let them keep an intelligent interest in the real life of the world, in reading good books, in cultivating those simple and innocent joys that may outlast any age. Few things are more important than this. Those whose happiness depends upon exciting pleasures must grow sad when old age puts such enjoyments beyond their reach. But they may learn to find unceasing delight in simple and always accessible pleasures, in the aspects of nature, in literature, in watching the great affairs of the world, in home delights, in innocent games and pastimes, in friendship and social intercourse. Let them especially live such clean, honorable, and helpful lives as shall save them from the unhappy and remorseful memories that make many an old age miserable, and as shall make the pictures hung up in the halls of memory, where so much of their time must be passed, a perpetual delight to look upon. And let them not be too much absorbed in things of little worth, but have their minds open to the wonders and glories of God's universe, to a trustful sense of his goodness, and of dear companionship with him, to the service of others, to the greatness of our immortal destiny,—in a word, to find the joy and support of true religion, so that, loving and serving God and their neighbor, their last days will be passed in serenity and peace.

And now, finally, how shall we who have passed our threescore years and ten, and are called old, be happy as our days glide by? Our supreme need is faith, such faith as Jesus had in God's presence, love, and care, in the sanctity of life and love and duty, and in the life immortal. If our faith is weak, let us make the most of what faith we have. Let us every day look up and say "God is my father," and keep saying it, and make this the constant attitude of our hearts. "God is my father" includes all praise and prayer. We may, as experience teaches many of us, helpfully read a page every day in some such manual of devotion as our own "Daily Praise and Prayer." It will inspire and bless us to learn to know Jesus in his transcendent personality, and so enthroned him in our hearts as an ideal companion as to realize Paul's word, "Christ formed within you the hope of glory." Let us, for the sake of others, as well as for our own, keep as cheerful a spirit as we can, have grateful appreciation of kindnesses shown us, and reciprocate such kindness as we can. Let us not lose the enjoyment of innocent pleasures and pastimes, keep as young as possible by association with the dear children about us, feast our eyes and thoughts on the beautiful and sublime aspects of nature, keep up our interest in current affairs and in good literature, and make the most of home love and neighborly friendship. And especially let us see that we are never too old to gain that best of all happiness that comes from adding something every day to the happiness of others. Then we may say, in the beautiful lines of Mrs. Howe,—

"My journey nears its close; in some still haven
My bark shall find its anchorage of rest,
When the kind Hand, which every good has given,
Opening with wider grace, shall give the best."
